WIFE SHOOTS A MAN SHE LOVES TO OBEY HUSBAND

Details of Tragedy Are Arranged by Husband Who Leaves to Make Alibi.

LETTER LURES ADMIRER

Victim Refused to Tell Who Wounded Him—Confession Follows Arrest.

"WHAT DO YOU MEAN?"

"I am Going to Kill You!" Woman Cried as She Pulled Trigger.

BELLAIRE, O., March 20.—"I loved him, but I shot him. I was forced to shoot him. Had I failed I would have been shot myself." In a wailing, terrified voice, Mrs. Mary Smith confessed today how she had dangerously wounded the man she loved.

Mrs. Smith and her husband, an official in the local miners' union, are now in Jail, charged with the shooting of Noble Ault, who on March 3 was dangerously wounded after he had gone to a rendezvous appointed by the woman.

According to Mrs. Smith's confession, she had accepted attentions from Ault and her husband had found her out. Immediately, said Mrs. Smith, she was terorized by the threats of her husband. Noble Smith, and finally to save her own life, she consented to lure her lover to his death and to strike the fatal blow herself.

Accordingly Smith bought his wife a revolver; he dictated a letter to Ault in which Mrs. Smith asked Ault to meet her near the Smith home in Glencoe the night of March 3. Smith accompanied his wife to the spot and after making sure that the woman would carry out his orders, he went to the mine where he is employed as foreman.

"This was done," explains the wife, "so he could prove an alibi in the event of his being arrested."

Ault kept the appointment and while he was talking to Mrs. Smith she suddenly raised her arm and pointed the revolver at him.

"My God, Mary, what do you mean?" gasped the astonished Ault.

"I mean I am going to kill you," Mrs. Smith says she yelled, and with that she pulled the trigger, the bullet hitting Ault's abdomen. The wounded man refused to tell who shot him, at first declaring the shooting had been an accident, but after some inquiry the police arrested Smith and his wife.

The mine foreman at once brought witnesses to prove he had been in the mine at the time of the shooting and until today he was in a fair way of escaping. The wife's confession has put a different face on matters.

Ault is recovering.

300-POUND MAYOR FALLS AND STARTS A SPRING IN CELLAR

Gusher Under Barn Satisfies His Old Wish for Place to Water Stock.

WINSTED, Conn., March 20.—A strange phenomena in Burrville, five miles south of here, has set the village folk agog. John H. Burr, known as the Mayor of the village, because he owns more property and weighs more than any other one there, took a tumble in the cellar of his horse barn a few days ago, his 300 pounds of avoirdupois shaking the earth so that a spring came to the surface.

The barn was built 20 years ago and no sign of water was ever seen there before. The spring boils up yet. Most of the water drains off, as the bottom of the cellar is only covered to a depth of three inches. Mayor Burr had often wished that he had a place in one of his buildings to water his stock.

BASHFUL DAN OUTGROWS IT; WELCOMES 12-POUND BOY

Daniel Matthews of Jerseyville, who was so bashful he had to make four attempts before he could summon courage to marry, is blushing again.

There's a 12-pound boy at his house. Dan's way of celebrating the event was the same as when he became a benedict. He bought "two-fer" cigars for all his friends.

The son and heir of the bashful man will be called Daniel Matthews Jr.

"What are you going to make of him?" the proud father was asked.

"A married man, I think," said Dan. "That's the only life."

THREE DIE IN GANGWAY'S FALL

Forty Workmen Injured in English Shipyard Accident.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS, England, March 20.—A gangway connecting the battleship Vanguard with the wharf at the Vickers Son-Maxim yard, collapsed today. Fifty workmen were precipitated to the deck. Three of them were killed and 40 injured.

ONE DEAD; ONE DYING AFTER A FIGHT ON TRAIN

Body of Man, Evidently Thrown From Window, Found by Track.

COUSINS IN CUSTODY

One of Them Fatally Wounded in Three-Cornered Pistol Conflict.

CLARENDON, Tex., March 20.—An unidentified man is dead and Floyd Autrey, of Fort Worth, is dying here as the result of a three cornered fight with revolvers on a Fort Worth and Denver train near Giles, Tex., today.

That Autrey and his cousin, Fred Garrett, of Fort Worth, killed a third participant in the fight and threw the body out of a coach window, is indicated by the finding of a body near Estelline Bridge later by the police.

Autrey, who is fatally wounded, is in a hospital here and he and Garrett are in custody.

TEN INDICTMENTS AGAINST MAYBRAY FOUND IN IOWA

Each Charges Conspiracy and Larceny in Wholesale Swindling Cases.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Io., March 20.—The grand jury of the District Court of this county at noon today returned 10 indictments in the wholesale swindling cases.

The announcement was made that each of the indictments is against J. C. Maybray and others, but the names of none of the others were made public, it being intimated that some of them are not yet under arrest. Conspiracy and larceny is charged in each indictment.

The grand jury, after returning the indictments, took a recess until May 10. The complaining witnesses in the 10 cases are Samuel Sutor of Cass Lake, Minn.; Joseph P. Walker, Denver; J. Hemelbracht, Bancroft, Neb.; W. H. Bedford, Bolokow, Mo.; Dr. C. C. Vanderbeck, St. Louis.

UNCONSCIOUS MAN WITH EYES WIDE OPEN PUZZLES DOCTORS

Physicians Can't Substantiate Theory That Bequette Was Poisoned by Gas.

Physicians at the City Hospital are puzzled at the condition of Anderson Bequette of 7306 South Broadway, who was taken there Friday night unconscious. Despite every effort on their part to restore him, Bequette was unconscious Saturday, lying with his eyes open and glaring.

At midnight Friday other lodgers in the house with Bequette smelled gas escaping from his room. When they entered the room was filled with the fumes of gas and the jet was wide open.

At the hospital it was believed Bequette was suffering from gas poisoning, but the physicians can find no trace of such. There is nothing in the man's history to show he ever had epilepsy, and the physicians are at a loss to diagnose his disease.

BILL PROPOSES NEW DESIGN FOR THE STARS AND STRIPES

Representative Ansberry of Ohio Suggests Combination of Arcs in Form of Pentagon.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A new "old glory" is proposed in a bill recently introduced by Representative Ansberry of Ohio, to amend the section of the revised statutes which relates to the design of the American flag. A new formation of the stars is suggested. They would be arranged "in five arcs in combination, the centers of the arcs to be the apics of a regular pentagon, the radius of the arcs to be equal to one side of the pentagon."

As to the size of the stars, the bill prescribes that their radius shall be equal to "one-fourth the distance of the stars from center to center."

Provision for adding new stars for new states might be made by extending the arcs.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE STOLEN BOY AND HIS FATHER, AND MAP OF TERRITORY BEING SEARCHED FOR KIDNAPERS

CLEVELAND BOY IS NOT KIDNAPED BILLY WHITLA

Millionaire Uncle Finds Child Is Not Nephew, and Says He Will Open Negotiations to Pay $10,000 Ransom.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., March 20.—That Kidnaped Billy Whitla is not in Cleveland and has not been here is the conclusion to which both the police and Frank H. Buhl, the boy's millionaire uncle, were forced to reach today when the boy who was seen at the Euclid Hotel Thursday night was found and declared by Mr. Buhl not to be his nephew. The boy, whose name is Satzell, was found in Collinwood and was identified by Frank Dougherty, the Euclid clerk, as the boy who was brought to the hotel Thursday night by Harry Ball, a restaurant cook. Buhl says the mistake is excusable because the Satzell boy closely resembles "Billy." Ball has been released.

Buhl says that the break-down of the theory that the boy taken to the hotel by Ball was Billy Whitla leaves him no clew whatever on which to work. He and the detectives have exhausted their ingenuity, but this has been the only tangible clew that has presented itself. Buhl, who has his automobile constantly ready for instant service, says he will remain in Cleveland and open negotiations with the kidnapers. He says he is willing to pay the $10,000 at once if it will end the horrible suspense under which he and the child's parents are suffering.

Circui Judge C. M. Wilkins of Warren, O., granted unofficial permission to J. P. Whitla of Sharon, the boy's father, this morning to have the State police of Pennsylvania enter Thumbull County, O., to search for Billy. It was in Warren, the county seat of Trumbull County, that the rig in which the boy was taken from Sharon to Warren was abandoned. The police of Warren still believe the boy is being concealed in the neighborhood of Warren.

Whitla made the request of Judge Wilkins over the long-distance telephone this morning.

They would willingly and secretly pay the ransom of $10,000 if given an opportunity. They have slept but little since the kidnaping Thursday morning and they are apparently resigned to the fact that the kidnapers have the upper hand and they are anxiously awaiting some intelligence from them as to what they are to do to get the boy back.

Every clew, no matter how slight, is being run down by the boy's uncle, Frank H. Buhl, the millionaire steel manufacturer, who, after an exhaustive but unsuccessful search in Cleveland last night, will return to Sharon this afternoon.

Similar Case in Sharon.

The abduction has recalled an almost similar kidnaping at Sharon 10 years ago, when the 8-months-old son of a wealthy resident, A. Levine, was the victim. The child's nurse had left the baby in its carriage on the street, while she entered a store to make a purchase. During her absence the baby was stolen from its carriage.

Several hours later the parents received a letter informing them that the child would be restord on payment of $5000 and no publicity. It was decided to pay the ransom. A spot was designated and two detectives were detailed to watch the place and make an arrest, after the money had been taken. An hour before the time agreed upon for the placing of the money a letter was received by the parents. It read:

"You have the police watching us to arrest us. We do not want your money now, but we have got your baby. You will never hear from us again."

The kidnapers kept their word, but the father who was also a friend of J. P. Whitla, spent nearly every cent he had in trying to get a trace of his child. A year later a peddler discovered the kidnaped child in a home at Punxsutawney, Pa., where it had been left by a man and woman.

Ready to Pay Ransom.

SHARON, Pa., March 20.—Sobbing and crying, James P. Whitla, the father of the kidnaped boy, broke down at noon today when no word had been received from the abductors. He said he wanted to impress on every person interested in the recovery of the boy that all he wanted was to see his child safe back home. He said he was ready to pay the $10,000 ransom at any time and had authorized agents ready to pay over the money.

Word was received today from Mr. Buhl, the boy's uncle, that he would remain in Cleveland today to be ready to open negotiations with the kidnapers.

Although every clew is being run down nothing has developed to give the searchers the slightest ray of hope, and their work on the case is no further advanced than when they first began.

Pat Crowe to Help.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Pat Crowe, kidnaper of Edward Cudahy, is to aid in the search for Billy Whitla, the boy kidnaped and held for $10,000 ransom at Sharon, Pa.

The reformed criminal is now in Pontiac, Ill., arranging for lectures, but his wife reached him by telephone. She asserts that Crowe would be of aid in this case through deductions drawn from his own experience.

"Pat is anxious to do something to atone for his own deeds," said Mrs. Crowe today, "and in this Pennsylvania case I see an opportunity for him. I am sure he will be anxious to aid in running down the kidnapers."

HADLEY DENIES HE SEEKS PLACE AS FEDERAL JUDGE

Gov. Hadley in a conversation with a Post-Dispatch reporter over the long distance telephone Saturday, denied a story published in an afternoon newspaper to the effect that he (Hadley) "has formally applied to President Taft for a United States judgeship in the Northwest, and, moreover, that he is to be given what he desires as soon as there is a vacancy."

"This is all news to me," said the Governor, with a laugh.

"I am not now and never have been a candidate for any Federal position," he continued.

"There is not now, and never has been, the slightest intention or desire on my part to leave the office of Governor, which I intend to fill to the best of my ability for the next four years."

The Governor laughed again when told that the story credited Senator Warner with having visited the White House for the express "purpose of asking President Taft to make the Missouri Governor a Federal Judge."

"I do not think it is worth while to say anything on that point, as Senator Warner can answer for himself," said the Governor. "So far as the story relates to me, it is without foundation in fact."

MRS. LAMBERT IS WARNED BY "JOE" AGAINST DRINK

"Shun Cigarettes, Nellie," Is Advice From Hannegan's Spirit Guide; Then She Hears Wings---Medium's Arm Stretched.

Will Hannegan has come into the spot light again. Hannegan is the young man who, while nurse and companion of Junior Lambert, the son of Jordan Lambert, the wealthy manufacturer, became famous in a night by the publication of his doings with spirits in the Lambert home.

Prof. James Hyslop of the American Society for Psychical Research has recently said that Hannegan is a highly gifted "supernormal man." He also says that spiritualists all over the country regard Hannegan as the greatest natural medium in the country.

The Journal of the American Society of Psychical Research is out with the further doings of Hannegan and his famous guide, Joe Wentworth, the bold pirate of the Spanish main, who died in Cuba several centuries ago.

In his last exposition Joe Wentworth develops a strong moral tendency and advises Mrs. Lambert to shun drink and cigarettes.

It is related in the Journal how Hannegan sat down one night with Joe by his side and taking pencil and pad began to write at Joe's dictation.

Advice to Mrs. Lambert.

"Now, my dear child," said Joe, meaning Mrs. Lambert, "you are not the worldling that you say you are; only not like everyone else. You must, however, build up your health, and that is why we want you to be abstemious and careful. A man can do things without hurt that unbalance a delicate organization like a woman's. It is not that drinking is sinful on your part, but it is not good for your body."

"Of course, you do not take enough to harm your soul," continued Joe. "Your soul is good and pure, though you are sincere in thinking it is not. Do not smoke cigarettes, dear Nellie. They are indeed harmful, not only to the soul, but to the lungs."

Joe's lecture on morals and hygiene was interrupted just then by a crash on the porch. "Just previous to this," Mrs. Lambert says in her report to the Journal, "we heard a sound of wings."

Hannegan's Arm Stretched.

When Joe was asked what he had been doing he evaded the question by saying that he could elongate Hannegan's arm. Hannegan's arm was then stretched seven inches longer than normal.

Then a spirit named Norman cut into the conversation and said that it was he who had stretched Hannegan's arm, and a little later Hannegan's arm was stretched 20 inches longer than normal.

This made Joe jealous and he wrote this message:

"I love you all so much that I will give you everything, so that you can prove anything you like, and oh, how I love you all! And so good-night and good-by."

On another occasion Mrs. Lambert asked Joe, through Hannegan, why it was harmful for her to drink. "You make no objection to Mr. Lambert drinking, and he takes more than I," said Mrs. Lambert.

"He is a man," said Joe.

At another meeting at which Mrs. Lambert was absent from the room for a few minutes, Hanpegan said to Joe, "Now, Joe, tell us where Mrs. Lambert is, and what she is doing."

At this moment Mrs. Lambert returned as Hannegan's hand was tracing this message on the pad of paper:

"She has gone to get some—" The pencil hesitated, then stopped.

"Go ahead, Joe, and tell them. I don't mind," Mrs. Lambert said.

"She went to get some whisky," said Joe with brutal frankness.

"The answer was correct," said Mrs. Lambert in her report of the occurrences in the Journal.

Mr. Lambert is in New York and Mrs. Lambert refused to elaborate on the experience for a Post-Dispatch reporter.

ROBBERS DYNAMITE IOWA BANK

DES MOINES, Io., March 20.—Safeblowers dynamited the safe of the First National Bank of Imogene, Page County, during the night and took all the cash on hand.

Section hands on their way to work early this morning discovered the bank had been robbed and reported to the officers. Several thousand dollars is reported to have been taken.

COOPERS GUILTY OF 2D-DEGREE MURDER; 20 YEARS IN PRISON

Six Jurors Favored First Degree and Only One of Them Voted for Acquittal.

BOND FOR APPEAL FIXED AT $25,000 BY THE COURT

Attorneys Will Argue That Disagreement Reported Yesterday Was a Verdict and That Sending Them Back to Deliberate Was Coercion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 21.—Col. Duncan B. Cooper and his son, Robin, have been found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of former Senator E. W. Carmack, and their punishment fixed at 20 years in the penitentiary. Their bond pending motion for a new trial was placed at $25,000, which was satisfactory to both sides.

The verdict was a compromise reached after three days' deliberation. Six jurors favored first degree, "with mitigating circumstances," five voted for second degree, with 20 years' imprisonment and one voted for acquittal. When he finally agreed to 20 years those arguing for the death penalty accepted the compromise.

The defendants took the verdict coolly—almost without emotion. Mrs. Burch and Mrs. Wilson, daughters of Col. Cooper, were brave and aside from tearful eyes, restrained their emotion gamely. Mrs. Burch sat with her arm around her brother Robin's shoulder and Mrs. Wilson was at her father's right. The suspense for the two young women had been heartrending and any verdict, however unfavorable, was a relief.

The jurors were tired looking and disheveled and when the Court remarked:

"I thank you, gentlemen, for your patience and devotion to the State and dismiss you to your homes and your personal avocations," the entire 12 sprang from their seats as one man and hurriedly left the courtroom. The defendants and their counsel remained to complete the bond preliminaries and motions for a new trial.

Various and insistent rumors that the jury had agreed were responsible for a crowded courtroom this morning and for the presence of attorneys on both sides long before the usual hour for convening.

As soon as Judge Hart entered court and even before he removed his overcoat, he ordered the jury and the defendants brought into court.

"I understand they have agreed," he remarked to the press table, "and am sending to see."

Attorney Asks That Case Be Called Mistrial Because of Disagreement

In almost a moment—9:25, to be exact—the 12 men entered the room and took the same seats they have occupied for nearly nine weeks.

"Have you agreed upon a verdict, gentlemen?" said Judge Hart.

"We have," replied Foreman E. M. Burke, hoarsely.

"Advance, Mr. Foreman, and read the verdict."

"We, the jury, find the defendants, Duncan B. Cooper and Robin J. Cooper, guilty of murder in the second degree, and assess their punishment at confinement in the State penitentiary for a period of 20 years."

"So say you all, gentlemen?"

"So say we all," in chorus.

In a second Judge Anderson, of the defense, was on his feet exclaiming:

"Your Honor, we move the case be declared a mistrial because of the verdict yesterday. We contend that yesterday's verdict was the only one, and that it acquitted John Sharp, but declared a disagreement on the other defendants. We also ask that the defendants be admitted to bond at once."

"The verdict of the jury makes it a bailable case," was the Court's retort. "Hence I will fix the bond of each defendant at $35,000, unless there be some objection. In that event I will hear arguments."

"It is satisfactory to us," said Attorney-General McCarn.

"And to us," retorted Judge Anderson.

He added that he would be ready to argue the motion for a new trial next week.

Six Jurors Voted for First Degree and Only One Favored Acquittal

The bond book was done and the defendants signed the bond and returned with their relatives and friends to the room they have occupied in the Jail building.

The jurors were not inclined to talk, but one of them said:

"On the first ballot we acquitted John Sharp and disregarded the conspiracy theory. On this same ballot we stood six for guilty of murder in the first degree with mitigating circumstances, five for murder in the second degree, with 20 years, the maximum penalty, and one for acquittal. The ballots all day Wednesday and Thursday showed the same result.

"Yesterday the man who voted for acquittal went over to murder in the second degree, but demanded that only 10 years be assessed. The rest of us did not deem 10 years as anything like adequate, so we disagreed again. Of course, all this refers to the Coopers, not Sharp, whom we had acquitted.

"Early this morning the man who was holding out for 10 years agreed to 20 years and the six who were voting for a first degree verdict agreed to this verdict."

While the jurors would not say who the man was who held out for acquittal, it is known from remarks overheard by the deputies that he was S. J. Hide.

John Sharp [illegible] the Courthouse when he heard of the verdict and was soon closeted with the defendants and their counsel. Mrs. Sharp was in court when the jury reported and comforted the two daughters of Col. Cooper with her presence and sympathy.

Several other faithful girl friends were with them during the ordeal and accompanied them to the room of the defendants, where they awaited the arrival of bondsmen. The first to arrive was John J. Greener, who signed for $10,000 on each bond.

Several others had been sent for and telephoned that they would come as quickly as automobiles would bring them. In a few moments Walter O. Farmer arrived and signed for the balance.

"I will sign for a million for these men," he remarked. James E. Caldwell later signed for $35,000 on each bond and H. B. Chadburn and C. W. Anderson for $2500 each on each bond. This makes the total bonds in both cases $110,000, although only $50,000 was asked.

The Burch automobile came up a little later and the party was whirled away to the Bradford home.

There will be no further proceeding in the case for about a week.

Attorneys Anderson and Washington paved the way for appeal yesterday when they compelled Judge Hart to record the exact words of the jury in reporting the verdict of acquittal in the case of Sharp. By order of the Court Clerk Haley entered the words:

"We, the jury, find John D. Sharp not guilty as charged in the indictment, as to the two defendants Cooper, we report that we are hopelessly tied."

With this as a text the appeal will be taken. The defense will hold that the judge erred at that time in not discharging the jury.

"We will argue in the higher courts that the sending of the jury back, after such a report with an admonition that they would have to agree was coercion, and that this denied the accused the right of a free trial guaranteed by the Constitution," said Judge Anderson.

CAPITAL AT LAST BELIEVES KERENS WILL GET PLACE

Washington, at First Incredulous, Accepts Report of Ambassadorship.

"FIXED" WITH WARNER

Understood Senator Is Supporting St. Louis Man to Remove Rival.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The statement that Richard Kerens of St. Louis had been decided upon as United States Ambassador at Vienna was received here at first with credulity, but the belief is forced on the capital today that it is true, at least up to this time.

There is a definite report in Washington that Mr. Kerens secured some indorsements for a position in Mr. Taft's Cabinet and that when Mr. Taft choose another Missourian, Mr. Nagel, because of his legal ability, Mr. Kerens used the indorsements to obtain the place at Vienna. There is a definite understanding between Mr. Kerens and Senator Warner that if the former gets the diplomatic post, Senator Warner will not have to worry about Mr. Kerens as a rival candidate for Senator. That is the explanation of Senator Warner's support of Kerens.

Three ambassadors are expected to be announced today—to Vienna, to Rome, to Constantinople. Other changes will follow gradually, but some of them not until next fall.

Reid to Serve Out Term.

Whitelaw Reid, at London, will be allowed to serve out his term, which ends in June. As that date is the height of the London fashionable season, and as the American Ambassador is expected to take a prominent part in "the season," Mr. Reid probably will not leave that post until autumn.

Former President Eliot of Harvard has been spoken of for the place often, but it is regarded as certain here that the recent Vice-President, Mr. Fairbanks, can have the place if he wishes it. It is pointed out that Mr. Taft made one of his rivals for the presidency, Mr. Knox, the leading adviser of his administration, and that, ability granted, the other aspirants for the place that Mr. Taft got will be recognized in places of importance and dignity.

In addition Washington remembers now the enthusiasm with which Mr. Fairbanks was received in Canada when he acted as the United States' representative on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales.

Would Welcome Fairbanks.

All reports from there were to the effect that the personality of Mr. Fairbanks appealed to the British temperament, and that he was not only persona grata, but enthusiastically so, in King Edward's domain.

No change will be made at Paris for at least six months, and the man to take the place of Ambassador Henry White has not been selected. It has been decided that Mr. White is to leave the service. Reports that Robert Bacon is to be appointed are not credited here. He has no claim on the Taft administration. It is not unlikely that there will be a promotion from some other post in Europe to Paris.

Ambassador Hill probably will remain at Berlin.

Ambassador Leishmann will go to Rome, and it is probable that Oscar S. Straus will succeed him at Constantinople.

Ide Close Friend of Taft.

Henry C. Ide is scheduled to be the United States representative at Madrid. This selection is partly personal with Mr. Taft. The two served on the Philippine commission and have been close personal friends. In addition Mr. Taft feels that Mr. Ide's knowledge of Spain's relations to the United States, gained in his service just after the war, will be of particular advantage to him and to the country.

Truman H. Newberry, late Secretary of the Navy, has been mentioned persistently for a diplomatic post, and the latest report assigns him to St. Petersburg. But Mr. Newberry repeated last night the statement that he made some time ago, that he would not have any official position under the present administration. Mr. Newberry was much interested in the navy work and would have liked to stay there; but he says that he will not take any other place.

Charles H. Sherrill, a New York attorney, is slated for Minister to Argentine. It is possible that Chester I. Long, former Senator from Kansas, run over by Bristow and the reform movement, will be sent as Ambassador to Russia.

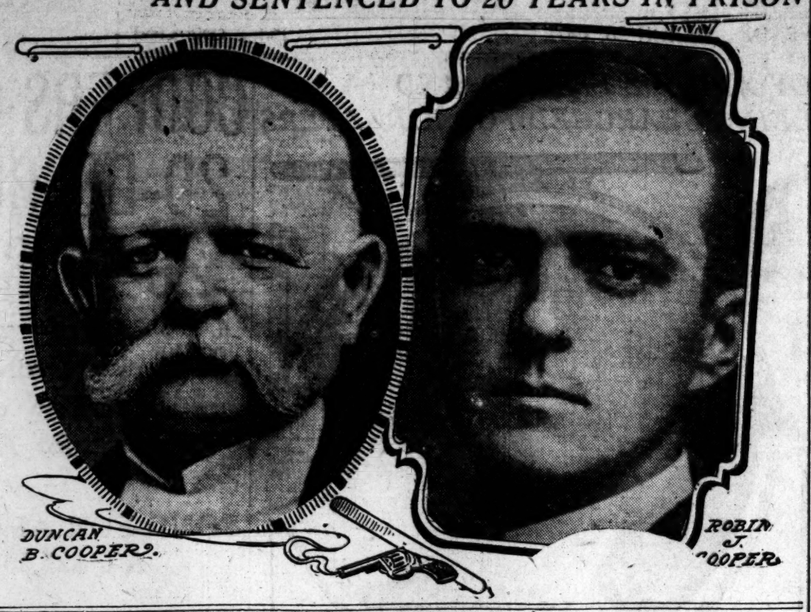

BUSCH URGES BRONZE BUSTS

Wires Offer to Give $2000 for Memorials to Editors.

Adolphus Busch, in a telegram from his winter home in California, to Edward L. Preetorius, urges the raising of a fund to place double life-size bronze busts of Dr. Emil Preetorius and Carl Daenzer, pioneer German editors in St. Louis, in Lafayette Park. Mr. Busch signified his willingness to start the fund with a subscription of $2000.

Dr. Preetorius was editor of the Westliche Post and Mr. Daenzer was editor of the Anzeiger. Both resided near Lafayette park, and for that reason Mr. Busch suggested the memorial bronze should be erected there.

FATHER AND SON CONVICTED OF MURDER AND SENTENCED TO 20 YEARS IN PRISON

WOMAN TO GET MEALS THROUGH RUBBER TUBE

Two Unusual Operations Performed at the City Hospital to Save Life.

Leading St. Louis surgeons Saturday witnessed two operations performed at the City Hospital which are far out of the ordinary requirements of the profession, and which called for constructive ingenuity in making over parts of two human bodies, to repair the effects of accidents which would otherwise soon have proved fatal.

A rubber tube was introduced into the left side of Mrs. Anna Davis, 30 years old, of Mount Olive, Ill. It will henceforth be her only means of eating. The usual organs of swallowing were rendered useless by a draft of lye which she swallowed a few days ago, thinking it water.

The rubber tube will convey food to her stomach in the same manner as the mouth and throat would do. As she is without means of mastication, the food will be liquid or finely ground solid substances. She will never again, the surgeons say, taste food, and one article will be the same to her as another.

The subject of the other operation was George Watkins, 60 years old, of 826 Buchanan street. He has suffered from a sliver of steel, traveling up and down his left arm and wearing out the artery, until the walls of the artery were almost ready to give way. The surgeons tied up the artery, deflected the flow of blood to a smaller artery, then removed the steel splinter with the X-ray's help, and opened the old artery, which, they say, will heal and fill with blood again after a time.

CHEAPER FARES DURING RUSH HOURS AFFORD CHANCES FOR TAKING ECONOMICAL DRINKS

Killing Time While Waiting for Reduced Rates May Tend to Boom Drinking.

Senator Gardner has introduced a bill into the Missouri Legislature fixing the fare in morning and evening "rush" hours on St. Louis street car lines at 3 cents, the present 5-cent rate to prevail at other times.

Now we poor slaves who haste to work at seven, or half past, are soon to come, with shouts of joy, into our own at last. While those who loaf on bankers' hours, from nine till three or four, will pay, as it is right they should, two copper pennies more than early birds (or early worms, whiche'er the case may be), who toil from dawn to dusk with ne'er a daylight moment free.

The shopper will be up 'ere day, to get the bargain fare, and going, hungry, to some store, will spend a quarter there for food she might have had at home, but for her frantic haste to keep her precious two-pence from going all to waste. Nor will she long with this new rate continue satisfied; she'll soon demand a trading stamp each time she takes a ride.

And, if we get off early some day, no more we'll think of hurrying to our happy homes; we'll stop and take a drink, and then, perhaps, another, until the time arrive when we can ride for three cents—'twere folly to pay five. And when our wives behold us, lit up with merry cheer, we'll check their wrath by saying, "I saved that two cents, dear."

W. A. Tyrrell Is Boiler Inspector.

Warren A. Tyrrell has been appointed by Mayor Wells as Inspector of Boilers and Elevators, to take the place of James R. Allison, who last week was chosen a Public Service Commissioner. Tyrrell has been a member of the Board of Engineers. A salary of $1800 a year is paid to the Boiler Inspector.

Second Suit in Berry Shooting.

Suit for $10,000 damages against Attorney Richard T. Brownrigg has been filed by John Berry, who was shot July 8, 1907, by Richard R. Haughton. Berry claims Brownrigg was involved with Haughton in the affair. Berry recently obtained a judgment against Haughton for $1500.

WICKERSHAM TO TAKE UP LIBEL CASES IN ORDER

Prosecutions Will Neither Be Pushed Unduly Nor Dropped Entirely.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—There will be no abandonment of the Panama Canal libel prosecution by the administration nor unseemly haste in bringing this case to trial according to a high administration official today. The cases will be allowed to take their places on the criminal calendars of the District of Columbia and elsewhere, an dwill be handled in the regular order of the Government.

Reports were circulated today that the administration had decided to let these cases lapse for the next four years.

Attorney-General Wickersham's investigation of these cases, it is said, has satisfied him that the Government should proceed with the prosecution. Whether he has advised President Taft of his attitude is not known, although he was today in conference with the President.

Many important cases are on hand in the Department of Justice and because of this congestion Mr. Wickersham will not make the libel cases special. The fact that they are not being pushed for trial probably gave rise to the reports that they would be indefinitely postponed.

INSURANCE COMPANY, SUED, SAYS FIRE WAS INCENDIARY

R. E. Moloney Is Plaintiff as Administrator of Self-Slain Brother's Estate.

Robert E. Moloney, administrator of the estate of his brother, David F. Moloney, filed two suits Saturday aggregating $3000, against the Royal Insurance Co., alleging that that amount is due as fire insurance on the home of David F. Moloney in Richmond Heights.

David Moloney killed himself Dec. 29 last, two days after his home was destroyed by fire. At the time of his suicide detectives were about to arrest him on a charge of arson. They said that Moloney had been seen setting fire to paper in his home.

Moloney and his wife, the daughter of F. E. Niesen, a real estate dealer, had separated a short time before the home was burned.

The insurance company has refused to pay the insurance on the ground that the fire was incendiary.

MABEL SAYS SHE WILL BE GOOD

Girl in Jail in Belleville Promises Reform.

Mabel Davis, in jail in Belleville for stealing while she was masquerading as a boy, says that she will never wear boy's clothing or smoke cigarettes again.

"I wore boy's clothing so I could bum my way around the country easier," she says. "The men and boys I traveled with, who thought I was a boy, taught me to smoke cigarettes. But now I have reformed and when I get out of jail I am going to work in someone's kitchen and be a goody-goody girl. You watch me. I'm going to be respectable from this on."

BREAKS PAROLE FOR HIS MOTHER; IS REARRESTED

Youth Left Illinois to Support Parent and Must Go Back to Reformatory.

The hand of the law was felt by Charles Lanham Saturday when he was arrested at the home of his mother, 2830 North Eleventh street, by officers sent for him from the Illinois reformatory at Pontiac. Lanham was on parole, which he broke by crossing the Illnois boundary into Missouri.

Lanham knew he was defying the law when he left Illinois, but he thought he could escape detection.

For the last eleven months Lanham has been working in the Neidringhaus Iron Mills, earning $12 a week, all of which he gave to his mother, he says.

Four years ago Lanham, then 17 years old, and two companions, were arrested at Pana, Ill., charged with stealing some cheese and crackers.

To Plead With Governor.

They were convicted and Lanham received an indeterminate sentence of from one to twenty years in the reformatory. Last May Lanham was paroled and was told not to leave the State. He found work on a farm near Pana, and was there when his mother wrote him that his brother had been so badly hurt he could not work and that her only support was gone.

"The thought of my mother without support so worked upon me that I was prompted to break my parole," said Lanham, speaking of his arrest. "It is pretty hard, for I have worked hard and obeyed every other law since I have been here."

"I'll walk all the way to Springfield and beg Gov. Deneen to let you out again," cried Mrs. Lanham, as she clung to her son at parting.

GRANDDAUGHTER GETS BIG PART OF LAWRENCE ESTATE

Former St. Louisan Leaves Bulk of Fortune to Wife and Mrs. Vera Hopkins.

The will of Dr. J. J. Lawrence, former St. Louis physician and a reputed millionaire, who died in New York last Sunday, was filed in the St. Louis Probate Court Saturday.

He bequeathes the bulk of his estate to his wife, Mrs. Josephine Lawrence, and his granddaughter, Mrs. Vera Hopkins, who before her marriage was Vera Siegrist. To Mrs. Hopkins' infant daughter is left the Lawrence homestead in Nash County, North Carolina.

The will recommends that Mrs. Lawrence retain as her home the mansion at 1080 Fifth avenue, New York.

James P. Dawson of Webster Groves is named as administrator, and is appointed as trustee of the bequests to Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Hopkins.

An income of $100 a month is left to Mrs. Lucy A. Duggan, a sister of the testator, and $50 a month is to be paid to Mrs. Addie Garvey, a niece.

The will states that Dr. Lawrence owned $50,000 worth of property in St. Louis.

SWEETHEART TO DECIDE BETWEEN TWO BROTHERS

Pius Kiel Starts to New York to Straighten Out Tangled Love Affairs.

GIRL CHANGED MIND

Started From Germany to Wed Pius, Fell in Love With Peter on Way.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKFIELD, Mo., March 20.—Pius Kiel started today for New York, where his brother, Peter, is waiting with Sibila Lambert, who started to this country to marry Pius, but now wants to marry Peter.

"I will let the girl decide between us," said Pius. "If she loves Peter better than she does me, and wants to marry him, I will be willing."

Pius is a typical young German, industrious, frugal and happy. He was formerly an assistant to his brother, Peter, who is a baker. He bought a 30-acre farm not far from town and has moved out onto it with the intention of doing farming after the fashion of German peasants.

Before starting to New York he talked freely about his brother and his sweetheart. Two years ago, he himself went back to Germany and it was then that he obtained from Sibila a promise to come over and marry him, as soon as he had a home.

During the six weeks of his brother's absence, Pius has been happy in anticipation of his bride's arrival and from every word and expression of his face, one must believe that he does not harbor a doubt of his sweetheart's steadfastness and Peter's fidelity.

DO YOU KNOW WHY THE TIDE OF POPULATION IS TURNING BACK AGAIN TO THE FARM LANDS?

Of course, you don't, if you haven't thought up or read up on the matter. Better inform yourself by perusing THOUGHT NO. 4.

INVESTMENT IN FARM LANDS

As the increase or decrease of population in any community regulates the value of real estate let us look first to the movement of people in the agricultural districts.

For many years the boys and girls on the farm have been attracted to the city by the glitter and glamour of its social life. Farm work was hard, friends were far away and daily life a monotonous round of drudgery.

But today the conditions are vastly altered. State universities have educated the farmer to a wonderful degree and new machinery has turned farm drudgery into scientific industry. Electric interurbans bring power, light and transportation to his very gate and connect him with the distant city.

Then, also, the allotment of free government land is practically exhausted now. This removes one of the principal causes for the low price of some farm lands where often a whole community has emigrated in a body to settle in some new locality in the West.

So with the tide of population turning back to the farms as it has already begun to do, there are offered splendid opportunities for investments which in a few years will increase rapidly in value.

The best place to locate bargains in farm lands is in the want ad columns of the Post-Dispatch—Sunday the best day of all. These should be carefully watched, and before long you will find that you have a full knowledge of the market in your locality.

(To be continued.)

Backward, flow backward, O, tide of the years!
I am so weary of toil and of tears,—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain!
Take them, and give me my farm life again!

STANLEY M'CORMICK CALLED UNABLE TO MANAGE ESTATE

California Court Asked to Appoint Guardian for Son of Harvester King.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., March 20.—That Stanley McCormick, son of the "Harvester King," is incompetent to manage his affairs, was the allegation made by his wife in the Superior Court here yesterday in a petition to have him declared incompetent and a guardian appointed to look after his person and estate.

McCormick came to Santa Barbara for his health and for a time seemed to improve. However, it later was apparent that his mind was failing. Recently it became evident to his wife that some action should be taken and the petition was accordingly drawn and placed before the Superior Court. It will come up for hearing in about two weeks.

Thirty Teams Are Entered in Post-Dispatch School League

UP TO noon Saturday there were 30 school teams registered in the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League for 1909. As the opening of the season is but two weeks off, and as the preparation of the schedule requires several days after the entries are closed, it is necessary that the captains of the teams not yet registered should file their entries immediately in the office of the League in the Post-Dispatch Building.

Last year 49 teams were entered. Among the 30 teams entered so far are a number that were not in the League last year, and as a result it is expected that there will be at least ten additional teams in the race for the pennant this year.

MARSHALS TAKE BANK EMPLOYES AS EMBEZZLERS

G. F. Smith Jr. and Will A. Gray Arrested at Homes by Federal Officers.

George F. Smith Jr., of 3403 Eads avenue, who is charged with embezzling $1200 from the Third National Bank, and Will A. Gray, of 3945 Cook avenue, charged with embezzling $895 from the National Bank of Commerce, were arrested Saturday morning at their homes by Deputy United States Marshals Williams and Knehans on Federal warrants. They are charged with violating the Federal laws by embezzling from national banks.

Both were released on bonds of $1000 each, Smith's bond being signed by John D. Manley and Mrs. Ethel A. Smith, the young man's mother, and Gray's by George W. Jones, secretary of the Evens & Howard Fire Brick Co. They were bound over to the Federal grand jury.

The amounts embezzled have been restored by friends of both young men, and it was thought there would be no prosecution. Their arrest Saturday was not made at the instance of the bonding companies who had been their sureties.

C. H. Huttig, president of the Third National Bank, said Saturday that the bank had nothing to do with the prosecution of Smith. The alleged defalcations of Smith were reported to the United States District Attorney by the bank examiner and it then became the duty of the attorney to prosecute.

WALKS STREET WITH NUMEROUS BONES BROKEN

Old Man, Found by Police, Supposed to Have Fallen Downstairs.

William Walker, an old man who has been stopping at Father Dempsey's home for the aged, is at the City Hospital "literally broken to pieces," to quote the physicians having his case in charge. He has a broken arm, a broken leg and his collar bone and probably several of his ribs are also broken.

In this condition he was found by the police of the Carr Street Station, wandering about the streets late Friday night. He had been drinking and was taken to the station for a rest.

Saturday when he was about to be released he complained of pains in his arm, leg and side, and was sent to the City Dispensary. There the various fractures of the bones were discovered and he was sent to the City Hospital.

The physicians who have examined him say that he has an excess of lime in his bones which renders them soft and easily broken and without causing the old man much pain.

Walker says his home is at 501 Biddle street, and the police believe his injuries were caused by falling down stairs at that place, but wonder at his ability to walk around as he did before he was taken to the police station.

CURTIS FIELD BURNHAM DEAD

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 20.—Curtis Field Burnham of Richmond, father of former Chief Justice Burnham, a graduate of Yale, 1840, member of the Electorial College in 1868, voting for Gen. Winfield Scott, an assistant secretary of the treasury under President Grant, and schoolmate of President Taft's father, is dead at Richmond, Ky.

Mr. Burnham's father and the father of Col. Sam Williams, formerly editor of the Post-Dispatch, belonged to the same Kentucky clan of Field-Burnham-McClanahan, who were the pioneer developers of Kentucky.

SMITH EXPLAINS HALLEN ARREST TO GOV. HADLEY

Chief of Detectives in Jefferson City to Discuss Charges Against Him.

CONSIDERED BY BOARD

Result of Friday's Inquiry by Commissioners Is Not Made Public.

Chief of Detectives Smith went to Jefferson City Saturday and was closeted there with Gov. Hadley. A statement was made that the Chief gave to the Governor an oral account of the arrest of Miss Hildegarde Hallen at her home at night in connection with the investigation of the affairs of her former employer, M. D. Fortner, a fugitive real estate man charged with fraud.

Neither Gov. Hadley nor Smith would state just what took place at the conference, but the Governor repeated his statement that he had asked for full information as to how the arrest of Miss Hallen was made.

"I did not order the second hearing which the Police Board had Friday afternoon," he said.

Smith Sees the Governor.

Whether Smith went to Jefferson City voluntarily or on a summons from the Governor has not been made clear, press dispatches from the capital say.

The Governor said that even after his conference with Smith is completed he will have nothing to give out except a repetition of his previous statement that he "will not rest in the matter until it has been cleared."

Smith spent nearly an hour at the secret session of the Board of Police Commissioners Friday afternoon. Two members of the board admitted that the Hallen arrest was discussed, but refused to be more definite as to what took place at the secret session.

Letters Sent to Mr. Hadley.

While Smith was in the Board room, Supt. Minster of the Pinkerton Detective Agency, which is looking for Fortner, was outside in the corridor. He was not called into the Board room.

Chase Morsey, attorney for Miss Hallen, said Saturday that he knows of no new developments in the investigation. Miss Hallen has not yet been asked to personally give her version of the arrest to the Governor, but affidavits and letters in large volume are now in Mr. Hadley's hands.

COMMITTEE ACTS MONDAY ON CAVE AND MULVIHILL

Republican Saloonists in Power Object to Daley's Substitute.

DWYER AND KELLY OUT

C. E. Gibson Takes Schroers' Place on Freeholders' Board Ticket.

The names of Thomas E. Mulvihill and Rhodes E. Cave as Democratic candidates for the Board of Education will be submitted to the Republican City Committee for approval Monday. Lawrence P. Daley, who was nominated by the Democratic Convention, withdrew, and suggested Mr. Mulvihill to take his place. The names of Dwyer and Kelley, the other Democratic nominees, have been dropped from the ticket.

Mr. Mulvihill notified Chairman Ward Saturday that he accepted the nomination.

Ex-Councilman Charles E. Gibson has been nominated by the Democratic City Committee to take the place of John Schroers on the Board of Freeholders. During his term in the Council Mr. Gibson was one of its most active members.

Daley was criticised as an undesirable candidate for the Board of Education, and pressure was brought to bear upon him to induce him to withdraw. Patrick J. O'Donnell, committeeman of the Fifth Ward, is generally credited by other members of the committee as having made the arguments to Daley that finally induced him to step aside.

In tendering his resignation Daley stated that he did so with the proviso that the name of Thomas E. Mulvihill should be substituted. Daley said he knew Mr. Mulvihill is capable of filling the office of School Director satisfactorily.

"Surely the public in general should accept the name of Thomas E. Mulvihill as a member of our School Board," said Daley in the closing paragraph of his formal resignation.

Daley stated to the committee that Mr. Mulvihill has made good with the element of all parties believing in the strict enforcement of the law, and especially with the religious people.

Saloonists Not Pleased.

There are several saloon keepers in the Republican City Committee, and objection to Mulvihill as a candidate for the Board of Education is expected to develop. In political circles it is generally conceded that Daley has shrewdly outwitted the Republicans by bringing Mulvihill forward for the Board of Education.

Mr. Mulvihill has not been active in politics. He aided Gov. Folk when he was Circuit Attorney in the prosecution of the boodlers, and his rejection by the Republicans would, according to the Democrats, start a storm of protest that would turn thousands of voters away from the Republican candidates.

Jeptha D. Howe, the Republican boss, stated a few days ago that he would not accept Mulvihill as a Democratic candidate. Howe now says he will submit Mulvihill's name to the committee. The Republicans have abandoned the plan to call in Democrats to nominate Democratic candidates for the School Board.

Other Resignations Expected.

Forms of resignations for William J. (Boots) Brennan, Frank Hussey and Henry Mahl of the Ninth Ward, have been prepared. It is expected that these candidates will affix their signatures to the resignations before the last withdrawal day, which has been officially fixed by the Board of Election Commissioners as March 27. The last day for filing independent nominations will be March 22.

No objection has been raised to Mr. Mahl, but Brennan and Hussey are members of the present House of Delegates combine, and have been subjected to severe criticism.

With the clean-up of the ticket the Democrats believe their chances for winning will be greatly improved.

TEACHER WHO DRANK ACID BY MISTAKE SUES DRUGGIST

Miss Olga Mueller Declares Clerk Gave Her Poison When She Asked for Paregoric.

Miss Olga Mueller, a school teacher, who lives at 1814 Washington avenue, filed a suit in the Circuit Court Saturday against J. F. Nelson, proprietor of the Marquette Hotel drug store, asking $4500 damages.

Miss Mueller says in her petition that Feb. 15 last she asked a clerk in the store for some paregoric and that he gave her carbolic acid instead. Before she discovered what the drug was, she swallowed some of it, with the result that her sense of taste has been destroyed and her voice has been weakened so as to impair her usefulness in her profession.

"I deny that the error alleged by Miss Mueller occurred in my store," said Mr. Nelson to a Post-Dispatch reporter Saturday. "I will fight this case through all the courts. Miss Mueller engaged a lawyer to bring this suit before she made any complaint about the alleged error to me."

This One-Piece Coat Suit Is the Nearest Thing Yet to No Clothes at All

Nothing but Buttons Between the Wearer and a Breach of the Peace.

Warning—Never Ask a Girl Wearing One to Remove Her Wraps; She Might Do It.

BY MARGUERITE MARTYN.

ANOTHER step in the direction of perfect modesty in woman is accomplished by the advent of the new one-piece coat suit. Lately we were taught by Prof. A. G. P. Collen, an explorer now lecturing in New York, that this desirable state is attainable only through total abstinence from clothes. He insisted that the only really ingenuous women, the only women who are absolutely artless and free from coquetry he has been able to discover through wide research and study, are those maidens of the Wanderalla tribe in Uganda, darkest Africa.

One by one the thoroughly advanced woman has laid aside superfluities of wearing apparel—yards of lingerie, which was the weakness of femininity a decade ago, has she laid upon the altar, and no one will deny that her sacrifice was made in the interest of simplicity and purity of line. The shimmering sheath gown of today reveals this chaste ambition if nothing more.

Now several more inches of insincerity, hypocrisy and artificiality in the way of petticoats and other obstructions have been gotten rid of with the adoption of the new one-piece coat suit. This is quite the newest and most popular importation shown in the shops. It consists of a single garment innocent of those artful and alluring qualities of lingerie, ancient aids to coquetry.

DOUBTLESS you have passed scores of them upon the streets and have not noticed them because of their shrinking nature. It is cruel to force upon them this notoriety, but if you are a bold, bad, unregenerate man, and believe not in their sweet simplicity, I write to warn you not to insist that a wearer of the new coat suit remove her wrap. She might, absentmindedly, from force of habit, comply, and being unschooled in the meaning of true modesty, you would receive a shock.

The fact is the only safeguard between your uneducated sensibilities and the shock lies in the buttons. To be sure these modish garments are well fortified with buttons. They extend from top to toe and are not likely to relinquish without a protest their time-honored function of keeping the clothes on her—not if we know buttons.

But heed my warning or trust them not too far, for the one-piece coat suit has not yet been exceeded in what is guilelessness according to the newly exploited theory and likely will not be until modistry changes a few more letters and becomes simple and simply modesty.

SUSPECTED COUNTERFEITERS, MAN AND WIFE, ARE ARRESTED

"Coniacker Queen" and Her Husband Are Taken in Raid on a Rooming House.

Stella Davis, who has served time for counterfeiting and who is known to the police of many cities as the "Coniacker Queen," was arrested, with her husband, Charles Davis, in a raid on their rooming house at 817 North Jefferson avenue early Saturday.

The police believed that they might have had something to do with the circulation of bogus five-dollar gold pieces which have been passed on grocers and boarding-house keepers recently.

No evidence against the Davises was found at the house, but they are held on the chance that they may be wanted by the Federal authorities.

With them were arrested Frank and Hazel Hassett, Lillian Betts and Lulu Bishop.

The house was searched for counterfeiting molds and tools, but none were found. The police confiscated an opium smoking outfit.

Stella Davis, who was released from the penitentiary two years ago, has been living in St. Louis a year.

She was arrested in a similar raid six months ago, but no evidence against her was found.

Schools Will Get Rubber Caps for Face-Washing Process.

CHICAGO, March 20.—It is unethical, not to say impolite, to wash a young woman's face without providing her with something to cover her hair. It is the custom at some schools to scrub the boys regularly in the morning, and it has been found necessary to include some of the girls, who have objected on the ground that it wets their hair.

MEDIUM ASKS COURT TO SAY IF COMMUNICATION WITH THE DEAD IS AN IMPOSSIBILITY

Her Attorney Quotes Authorities to Show That Matter Is Open to Doubt.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Mrs. May Pepper Vanderbilt, spiritualist, "Bishop of Brooklyn," asks, in effect, that the Kings County Court determine whether or not there is such a thing as communication with the spirit world. Counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt asks for the dismissal of the indictment against the medium, charging grand larceny. It is alleged by Miss Minerva Vanderbilt, a daughter of the aged husband of the medium, that she caused Vanderbilt by fraud and deceit to deed to her a house in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney now asks the Court to ascertain by what definite means the grand jury decided that spiritualism was a sham and a fake. The lawyer thus puts up to the Court the rather puzzling question of deciding how to prove whether the medium did or did not receive messages from the dead.

Because of divided authority, he argues, no one is competent to testify against her. In support of this contention the attorney attempts to show that spiritualism is a recognized religion and to prove this he quotes Alfred Russell Wallace, Sir William Crookes and other authorities and mentions Jules Verne, Marconi, William Lloyd Garrison, Salmon P. Chase, Bayard Taylor, Robert Owen, Parker Pillsbury and others.

WOMAN CONVICTED OF KILLING HUSBAND GETS INSURANCE

Sues on Policy After Governor Pardons Her and Is Awarded Verdict.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 20.—Mrs. Lena Margaret Lillie this morning won her suit against the Modern Woodmen. The jury in the District Court last night handed in a sealed verdict. When opened it was found that Mrs. Lillie had been awarded the sum of $4283.75. She sued for $4000 and interest and this sum was allowed.

Mrs. Lillie started the suit to collect the amount of the policy held by her husband whom she was accused of murdering. She was convicted and pardoned by Gov. Mickey just before he retired from office.

The trial in the Lancaster County District Court was practically a retrial of the murder case.

"I am pleased with the verdict," said Mrs. Lillie. "I shall immediately wire ex-Gov. Mickey and tell him of the victory. The jury has affirmed his opinion that I am an innocent woman."

SIGNS BAIL FOR SON-IN-LAW, BUT LEAVES HIS SON IN JAIL

Father Sides With Daughter's Husband, Abandoning Blood Kin in Cell.

Taking the part of his son-in-law against his son, A. J. Nelson, an East St. Louis oil dealer, left Albert Nelson in jail Saturday while he furnished bond for Edward Channon, arrested with young Nelson after a fight between the two.

Just a year ago Albert Nelson pursued Channon, his sister's runaway wooer, to Paris, Ill., and took him to East St. Louis on a charge of stealing a cornet from another sister.

Channon had left East St. Louis on the eve of the day set for his marriage to Grace Nelson, after a home had been furnished for them. While the young woman was broken-hearted, Albert Nelson started on Channon's trail, and a few days later had him in a police station.

Then it was learned that Channon already was married, and that he had fled to avoid committing bigamy. The elder Nelson was still kindly disposed toward him, and the charge of theft was dismissed, while Channon entered Nelson's employ and filed suit for divorce. On the day when the divorce was granted he married Grace Nelson.

Albert Nelson was the only member of the family who did not seem reconciled to the arrangement. His dissatisfaction increased as he came to believe that his father was favoring Channon over him in their work.

They quarreled Saturday in the yard of the Nelson home, 132 North Fourth street, and blows were struck. The elder Nelson ran out and, his son says, took Channon's part. When he failed to separate them he called a policeman.

BLOWS OUT GAS AND DIES; WIFE IS IN HOSPITAL

Illinoisan, Never in Big City Over Night Before, Asphyxiated in Hotel.

MYSTERY IN DEATH

Woman Undergoes Operation and Is Not Told Regarding Her Husband.

That Robert Adams of Mount Carmel, Ill., unfamiliar with the use of gas, blew out the light in his room, was the decision of the Coroner Saturday, after an inquiry into the circumstances of Adams' death at the Crescent Hotel, 2800 Locust street, though there was no definite testimony on this point.

A verdict of accidental asphyxiation was returned.

Walter Crowley of Mount Carmel, Adams' son-in-law, testified that Adams had never been in a large city over night before. J. M. Boggs, clerk at the hotel said he lit the gas for Adams, and forgot to tell him not to blow it out. He said he believed the guest's death was due to this mistake.

This testimony tended to solve what had been a mystery. It was thought that Adams might have ended his life because of worry over his wife, who was at the Washington University Hospital.

Wife Undergoes Operation.

Adams brought his wife to St. Louis Wednesday to be operated on. He had with him a letter of introduction to Dr. H. Tuholske from a physician in Mount Carmel. Dr. Tuholske sent Mrs. Adams to the hospital, and Adams engaged a room at the Crescent Hotel, where he registered without placing his address after his name. He had promised his wife that he would call at the hospital Friday morning and see her before she went under the influence of the anesthetic. He was not there and the operation was proceeded with.

When Mrs. Adams recovered from the anesthetic, she asked for her husband, wondering why he had not come to her. She was told that the rules of the hospital forbade her seeing him until she was better.

His Wife Not Told.

At about the same time a messenger arrived at the hospital from the Crescent Hotel with the news of the discovery of the body of Adams. Mrs. Adams has not yet been told of her husband's death, as it is feared that the shock might be fatal to her, although she is making satisfactory recovery from the operation.

Friday morning Nellie Robinson, a maid at the hotel, tried to arouse Adams, and, when she did not succeed, notified Mrs. Mary McElroy, wife of the manager of the hotel, who climbed on the roof of a porch and looked through a window into the room. She saw Adams lying on the bed with his clothes on.

Room Filled With Gas.

Policemen Davis, Obermiller and Britton of the Manchester Avenue Police Station were sent to the hotel and forced the door of the room.

The room was filled with gas and the jet in the wall was wide open with the gas pouring from it. Adams evidently had been dead several hours.

He had removed his coat, vest, shoes and hose before lying down, but was otherwise dressed. It was believed by the people at the hotel that he had committed suicide, but this was doubted later, and the police came to the conclusion that Adams had blown out the gas before lying down.

ATTACKED BY THREE NEGROES

Harold Forsythe, 42 years old, of Wheeling, W. Va., was found at Eighteenth and Locust streets at 12:30 Saturday morning with his skull fractured, told the police he had been assaulted by three unidentified negroes. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was stated his condition was serious.

Forsythe told the police he was walking along Locust street when the negroes approached him. He heard one of them say, "There's the fellow that made that remark." He was thrown to the sidewalk and kicked.

COMES FAR FOR BEAUTIFUL SPOT TO END HIS LIFE

Jilted Man Travels From Pennsylvania to Shores of Meramec for Suicide.

SAVED FROM DEATH

Officer Drags Him From Beneath Train and Is Cursed for Interfering.

Discarded by the woman he loved, Charles C. Porter, 27 years old, came all the way from Pennsylvania to St. Louis searching for a quiet and beautiful place in which he might end his life. Reaching here Friday he rode out to Meramec Highlands on a street car and walked along the picturesque banks of the Meramec River until he reached Valley Park. There he saw a freight train coming along the track upon which he was walking. He took from his pocket the last letter from his sweetheart, clutched it in his hand and lay down across the track in front of the approaching train.

His life was saved by John Sturdy, Deputy Sheriff, who was watching him, and who ran and pulled him from the track in time to prevent his being crushed under the wheels.

Porter cursed him for saving his life. "I want to die. Why don't you let me die in peace?" he said.

The officer took him to the Jail in Clayton and he will be held there until the authorities communicate with his relatives in Pennsylvania.

Last Letter Explains Act.

Porter says he left Alexandria, Pa., four days ago. In his distracted mind was the resolve to commit suicide, but he wished to end his life far away from the home of the woman he loved, so she would not be shocked by learning of it. And he wished to end his life in some beautiful spot, he said.

The last letter of his sweetheart, Miss Carrie Showalter of Alexandria, Pa., explains why she gave him up: It was:

Dearest Charles:

I think I have fought one of the hardest battles I have ever had with myself this last week and this letter is the result. Oh, darling, I am bitterly disappointed with you, no one knows how much but God and myself. And no one will ever know how I have fought with desire and what I know by the most bitter and painful experience I think a girl ever had. The agony I have endured the past week is beyond the telling. When I know you have failed in you most important promise to me as your future wife, I was completely ruined as far as hope was concerned.

God knows how I love you and will always. But if you cannot keep your promises before we are united you never will afterward.

Drink Alienates Girl.

Every word of this letter causes me more pain than it will you. You know, darling, what I mean, but I will tell you anyway. You have been drinking excessively. You do not deny it because I know it is a fact. Oh, Charles, how could you do it when you promised me not to. But you will have to suffer for your unfaithfulness.

I will not marry you, much though I love you. I could not run that risk after what I have learned. You have my love and will have it until you die or I. But that is all you shall ever possess. Oh, darling, it is killing me to give you up, but you have caused it by your own actions.

I was thinking of you while I was standing by the window Sunday. I was not sure it was you or I would have waved.

We must not correspond anymore. Do not answer this letter, as it will only increase the pain in my heart and it is almost breaking now.

Darling, love me a little anyway, for my sake, for I love you so madly.

From your own, CARRIE.

This letter was dated March 15. Porter says that when he received it and realized that he had lost by his own fault the only woman he ever loved or could love, and realizing that he could not give up drinking by his own strength, he decided to go away and kill himself. Since he left home he had drank a quart of whisky a day.

He declares he will end his life as soon as he is in a position to do so.

"There is nothing for me to live for," he says.

LIFE JOBS FOR EX-PRESIDENTS

Coudrey Proposes to Make Them Honorary Members of Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Once a President always a Government employe if either of two bills recently introduced in the House becomes a law. One offered by Representative Coudrey of Missouri makes ex-presidents honorary members of the United States Senate for life and as such gives them a salary of $25,000 per annum.

The other, introduced by Representative Bennet of New York, provides that ex-presidents shall have a seat in the House of Representatives, with the right of debating but not of voting. Under this bill they would receive the same compensation and allowances as members.

TOLD AFTER MARRIAGE THAT SHE IS NEGRESS

MRS CHARLES BAKER.

DYING GIRL BEGS THAT PLAYMATE BE NOT PUNISHED

"Don't Whip Tony," She Pleads After Fall, "He Didn't Mean to Hurt Me."

Five-year-old Marie Keersemaker's dying request was that her playmate, Tony Furst, who pushed her from a porch while trying to take a puppy she held, should not be punished. The fall, which was for hardly more than two feet, injured her spine so that she died one day after the accident.

"Tell Mrs. Furst not to whip Tony," said the little girl shortly before she closed her eyes for the last time. "He didn't mean to do it."

Little Tony was inconsolable Saturday, while the Keersemaker family, 5653 Spalding avenue, mourned the second loss it has suffered through the accidents which beset childhood.

Four years ago, when the family lived at 1227 South Seventh street, Jennie Keersemaker, then 4 years old and one of a pair of twins, was killed by a car. She was survived by her twin sister, Julia, by three brothers and the little sister who died Friday.

Marie and Tony Furst were playing Thursday afternoon on the porch of Tony's home, across the street from her house.

Tony's puppy ran back and forth between them. She caught the playful creature and held it. The boy tried to take it from her. They fell in their laughing contest, and Marie rolled from the porch. She lay crying for a moment, then got up and went home.

She told her mother she felt cold, and was put to bed. Thursday night she was in pain, and a physician was called, who decided that she had suffered some internal injury. She then told of her fall from the porch, saying repeatedly that Tony was not to blame.

LEARNS BRIDE IS NEGRESS AFTER HE IS ARRESTED

Young Wife Declares She Has Always Regarded Herself as a White Girl.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 21.—There could scarcely be a more sudden or distressing end to a honeymoon than happened to that of Charles Baker of Lexington. On Washington's birthday he was married to Sadie Rogers, a good-looking young woman whom he had known for three years. Today he is in Jail here awaiting trial on a charge of miscegenation, and is aware that his bride is a negro.

The charge was brought against the couple by the woman's half-brother, who lives here. He is unmistakably a negro. His half-sister, however, could pass for a white woman without the slightest trouble. Though of dark complexion and offering in her appearance evidence of her negro origin after one has been made aware of it, she would ordinarily be taken for a white woman.

There is as much tragedy in the affair for the woman as there is for Baker. Although she admits that she had been told she had negro blood in her veins, she says she had been reared as a white girl, and has come to consider herself a white girl. She does not remember her parents. She has always associated with white girls.

The case of the couple has been continued until March 25. Meanwhile they are in Jail for their honeymoon.

Baker enlisted in the army soon after he had met the girl three years ago. He was in love with her, however, and deserted to come back to Kentucky. He was captured and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. When he had served his time he returned to Kentucky, and he and the girl became engaged.

BEAR FIGHTS CROWD IN STREET

Animal Wanders Into Minneapolis and Finally Is Killed.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 20.—A bear fought a crowd of citizens in the streets yesterday and after a long battle was killed. The beast, which probably came down the Northern Pacific track or the river, was discovered by a boy who saw the animal hiding under a box car.

An alarm was given and a crowd gathered. It was suggested that the animal be captured alive, and men with ropes and clubs surrounded it. Once brought to bay the bear made such attacks upon the crowd that none dared approach. It was finally killed with a shotgun.

SERVIA HAS ACCEPTED ADVICE GIVEN BY POWERS TO DISARM

ST. PETERSBURG, March 20.—The Belgrade correspondent of the Bourse Gazette says in a dispatch that M. Milovanovich, the Foreign Minister, told him today that Servia had accepted the advice of the powers to disarm.

Servia considers the action of the powers to be a guarantee, and she no longer has reason to fear armed attack from any side.

PREPARE THIS PRESCRIPTION FOR RHEUMATISM AND KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Says This Easily Prepared Mixture Will Cure Before You Realize It.

Cut this out and put in some safe place, for it is valuable and worth more than anything else in the world if you should have an attack of rheumatism or bladder trouble or any derangement of the kidneys whatever.

The prescription is simple and can be made up by anyone at home. The ingredients can be had at any good prescription pharmacy and all that is necessary is to shake them well in a bottle.

Here it is: Fluid extract dandelion, one-half ounce; compound Kargon, one ounce; compound syrup of sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime. A few doses is said to relieve almost any case of bladder trouble, weakness and backache, pain about the kidneys, etc. It is now claimed to be the method of curing chronic rheumatism, because of its direct and positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys. It gives them life and power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood, relieving the worst forms of Rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles. The extract dandelion acts upon the stomach and liver and is used also extensively for relieving constipation and indigestion. Compound sarsaparilla cleans and enriches the blood. There is nothing better than Kargon Compound for the kidneys.

This prescription is safe to use at any time. * * *

GOOD NEWS.

"Lawler" Daley has contributed to his party the best service in his power by withdrawing from the School Board ticket. It would have been better if he had left the selection of his successor open. But no serious objection can be urged against Mr. Mulvihill. The Post-Dispatch has been the Excise Commissioner's severest critic, yet his errors in his present office are not of a kind which would foreshadow bad service in the School Board. He is honest and capable. His record is clean. He has shown no disposition to become a political hack or tool. With Mr. Cave as his associate the School Board ticket is acceptably completed.

If the report be true that the Democratic "combine" candidates are to follow Mr. Daley into retirement, not only Democrats but all good citizens will have reason to rejoice; the "combine" delegates will serve their party well.

In the event of withdrawal of the "combine" candidates on the Democratic ticket the Republican ticket alone will enjoy the distinction of a "combine alliance."

Missouri Republican leaders hail with gratification the appointment of Col. Kerens to a foreign post—the foreigner the better.

AN APOSTLE OF KINDNESS.

The Christian world is still so young that the man who gave inspiration and impetus to the movement for the protection of dumb animals died within the week. George T. Angell passed away last Tuesday in Boston at the age of 86. He was the founder and only president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This was not the first organization of the kind, but followed two years after the New York Society founded by Henry Bergh in 1866.

Long before that Mr. Angell had made a will devising his fortune to the propagation of humane sentiment and even earlier he had surrendered all other work that he might give exclusive attention to his mission of militant kindness.

A kind heart and an earnest soul are not usually the accompaniments of indefatigable industry and systematic pugnaciousness. But the joining of all these elements in Mr. Angell made a character sensible to pity, responsive to suffering and eager to prevent and punish it.

Education was the great weapon of this apostle of mercy. He wrote, traveled and lectured. He sowed the seed of compassion in the highways and byways of Europe and America. His little paper, "Our Dumb Animals," went into the homes and the schools. He initiated the "Bands of Mercy" movement and promoted numerous societies for the spread of the gospel of humaneness. He opposed vivisection vigorously and denounced it roundly. He criticised Mr. Roosevelt's bear-killing exploits and "Our Dumb Animals" was boycotted in the Washington schools as a result. The sparrow was not too small or mean to win his protection; the lion was not too big or voracious to have his defense.

A cruel teamster, abashed before a police judge, is evidence of the work of George T. Angell. A million children, taught kindness from the story of "Black Beauty," which he published, are his pupils. A thousand societies to protect animals are his monument.

It has all been accomplished within half a century, and the Christian world is 2000 years old.

A man was robbed in a P-A-Y-E car. Someone stole his strap.

MR. ROOSEVELT TELLS US ABOUT IT.

There can be no doubt what Socialism really is and what sort of people the Socialists are. Ex-President Roosevelt has said in the Outlook with frantic emphasis that the ism itself is the worst of all isms and the supporters of the wicked thing are the most contemptible of all corrupt people.

Some of us hoped that Mr. Roosevelt would explain the thing so we could understand it and think for ourselves. But he confines himself to the moral character of it, which, he tells us, is horribly immoral.

Granted; but people who get a blast of wrath when they hoped for the voice of reason are disappointed. Mr. Roosevelt sees all things clearly, and therefore his judgment may be relied upon, but new subscribers for the Outlook confidently expected him to open their eyes that they too might see and judge for themselves. It is not to be. Mr. Roosevelt will tell them what's what, and there is no good reason why they should wish to see for themselves.

If there is one clear-eyed man in the country it does not greatly matter if the rest of the population are blind. He won't let us fall into the ditch. Still, we should so like to see for ourselves.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

February 23, the day the Post-Dispatch published the names of four men selected by the Howe machine for the Republican ticket, the Globe-Democrat vigorously protested against the nomination of machine or incompetent men. Without mentioning names, it referred to men who had been suggested for office, clearly indicating the object of its protest, and threatened revolt in the event of their nomination. Here are excerpts from the Globe-Democrat's rebellious editorial:

St. Louis is a Republican city, as has been repeatedly demonstrated. But this does not signify that any municipal ticket can be elected simply because it is a Republican ticket. It is idle to expect Republican success with a machine-made ticket, or a ticket composed in whole or in part of incompetent and improper nominations. * * * The best way, and the only way, to elect a Republican municipal ticket in St. Louis is to make nominations which will be above criticism in point of character, ability and general fitness.

If the party leaders have not yet considered this aspect of the situation, it is high time they were giving it their serious attention. It would be a great misfortune and a bitter reproach to permit the Democrats to carry this splendid Republican city at the approaching election, and yet that is a confronting danger. Such a calamity can be averted only by nominating a Republican ticket which shall be recognized as first-class from top to bottom. Several persons are being put forward for important places who ought not to be nominated under any circumstances, and who, if nominated, will be defeated and probably drag the rest of the ticket down with them. * * * The Globe-Democrat has no candidate for any office, but it insists, in the interest of the party and the city, that a manifestly good ticket shall be selected; and in the event of different action, it will exercise the right, as it has done before, of making protest and declining to take the medicine.

Subsequently this warning was repeated by the Globe-Democrat with emphasis on the threat of repudiation.

All the candidates named as the slate selections, except one, were nominated. They were Kreismann for Mayor, Koeln for Collector, Anderson for Inspector of Weights and Measures and Thomson for Register. Mr. Witter, for many years foreman of the Globe-Democrat's composing room, was substituted for Mr. Thomson—a good change.

The Globe-Democrat has taken its "medicine," but is it any sweeter than it was before the Republican convention? Are there any objections that applied to Mr. Kreismann before his nomination that do not apply to him now? Is he any less an organization candidate?

What has given Mr. Anderson a fairer appearance in the Globe-Democrat's eyes?

As for Mr. Koeln, his published record puts him in the class of candidates condemned by the Globe-Democrat "who, if nominated, will be defeated and will drag the ticket down with them."

Since then all of Koeln's record as a member of the House combine of 1901-3 has been published. He participated in its caucuses, co-operated with it in blocking good legislation and shared in its benefits. The Globe-Democrat condemned him for betraying his party to help the Combine.

It was Koeln who led the forces which defeated the Howe plan to reform the House of Delegates two years ago and broke the reform slate. Koeln brought about the election of the Republican members of the present combine.

Howe himself denounced the action of Koeln's faction and openly repudiated the ticket. The City Committee subsequently approved Howe's bolt.

Does the Globe-Democrat approve Koeln's combine record and the elements he represents? What defense of him has it to offer?

A verdict of murder in the second degree and a sentence of 20 years' imprisonment for the slayers of Ex-Senator Carmack is a veritable triumph for justice in the South. The case presented in all its refinements the Southern idea that affairs between gentlemen are properly settled by the gentlemen themselves. But in this instance the court intervened, and a jury, forced to realization of its true responsibilities by an insistent judge, reached a conclusion almost epochal in its departure from Southern precedent.

INHERITANCE TAX ERRORS.

The objection to taxation of the same thing by State and nation is not the most cogent one to the inheritance tax provision of the Payne bill. The measure exempts only estates below $10,000. The limit is too low. It is a conceivable case that $10,000 might be the sum total of the fund of a widow and several orphans. It might be in the form of cash insurance, payable to the estate of the deceased; it might be a home and nothing more.

Should both the State and nation take toll from this mite? Should either?

The design of the inheritance tax law is to raise revenue, but from those who can obviously afford to pay. Usually it is not an objection to a general law of wholesome import that it may in an extreme case cause particular hardship. But we have cited no extreme case. The exemption in the Payne bill should be increased. No State should impose a tax of appreciable amount on an estate below $20,000. Insurance intended solely to place a dependent family above want should not be taxed. Estates of this kind are not wealth accumulations and protect the State from possible burdens.

Even if Ambassador-to-be Kerens could speak diplomatic French, could he give a December bail in which the electric effects would look like September moonlight and the roses make it smell like a $10,000 day in June?

Miss Mary McCann, who received a medal from Congress for saving lives when the Gen. Slocum excursion boat was burned, is entitled to another medal for letting Uncle Joe kiss her when the medal was presented.

An unconfirmed wireless report says an army transport is aground in Puget Sound. The reason more army transports don't go aground is that there isn't more ground.

The petition for an extension of the Tower Grove line is denied. No more of the Tower Grove brand of rails can be bought.

"The people do not seem to understand us," said Mr. Harriman. "Perhaps we have not talked enough." And perhaps all that money has been too loquacious.

Senator Kinney has moved to abolish the convicts' stripes just when they are becoming fashionable.

E. H. Harriman will have the distinction of being the first man to visit Panama for his health.

Now comes the tariff issue to testify that when the solid South breaks it won't be broke.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Mexican Revolutionists.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In reference to an editorial in your paper of today, headed "Arbitrary and Lawless Caprice," must say that same cannot be too highly appreciated by any liberty-loving American citizen. If Ricardo Flores Magon, Librado Rivera and Antonio Villareal are not guilty, why are they not released? If they are guilty, why are they not tried? Is it a fact that they are being held for a favorable opportunity to smuggle them across the border that they may be hanged to the limbs of trees or shot from ambush as thousands have been done under the brutal administration of President Diaz of Mexico. When Magon and his associates were shipped from Los Angeles to Arizona they were chained together like hyenas and surrounded by swaggering bullies, and yet these men are guilty of no crime, and the presumption is that they are innocent until proven otherwise. They are not even accorded the prison privileges that are common to burglars, highwaymen, cutthroats and murderers. What a travesty upon law. What an insult to manhood, and what an outrage upon justice.

Motorman Needs "Horse Sense."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In answer to "Electricity's" letter of last night, I would advise that it is not necessary to be an electrician to become a motorman. Just a little horse sense is needed. Throw off overhead switch or have conductor pull trolley down and all is safe.

ANOTHER ELECTRICIAN.

Where Are the Free Beds?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On two occasions I have tried to get unfortunate sick people into one of the free beds in St. Louis hospitals. On both occasions they were denied on the grounds that there were no free beds. I have been curious for years to know what becomes of the large sums that are collected each year in the downtown buildings by the wives and daughters of prominent citizens. Where are the free beds? The hospital people should be made to understand that Missourians must be shown. MONEYLESS MAN.

Ricardo Flores Magon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I am surprised to see you display such a lack of knowledge of the facts in a case discussed by you under the heading "Arbitrary and Lawless Caprice," in today's editorial page. I have no doubt but that if you were to inquire of the United States District Attorney at Los Angeles he could and would give you the facts in the case discussed, which are that Ricardo Flores Magon and his associates are under indictment in the United States Court at Tombstone, Ariz., for violating the United States neutrality laws, by using the protection of the United States to organize and equip a mob along the Mexican border, make excursions into Mexico, commit depredations there and return to the United States. They were arrested in Los Angeles and the United States authorities have been trying for more than a year to extradite them to Arizona for trial. Through their attorneys they asked for release under the writ of habeas corpus, which was denied them in the preliminary hearing, they appealed to the United States Court of Appeals, where they again lost, and then appealed to the United States Supreme Court, where it is still pending, or was until recently. And delays encountered by them have been of their own making and I believe you would find from the records that the United States officers would be willing and anxious to try them at any time. JUSTICE.

The Magon Case.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial Tuesday evening, March 16, "Arbitrary and Lawless Caprice," was an article that I have been searching for in various newspapers for weeks. Magon and his comrades have been subjected to treatment by the United States authorities such as the Russian officials visit upon political fugitives, or rather attempt to. I may ask with fear when will I or you be the next one to have a taste of justice such as Magon is getting? Thousands of Americans do not know of Magon's trials. If they did, what would they say? I always liked the Post-Dispatch. I believe you have the best, most fearless paper in the West. I will add that I am a traveling man (salesman). I know personally of Magon's case, having been in the Southwest.

U. S. Dominated by Trusts.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

As an editor of a daily or weekly newspaper for some twenty-eight years, I took cognizance of the arrogance and tyranny of the many corporations and trusts in the country a few years since, but it seems that they are growing worse and worse, and now want to absolutely dominate the country. I read in your paper a few weeks since that "government ownership of railroads is not far off" (idea brought back from abroad by Bryan), as the owners of the big railroads contemplated unloading them upon the Government, with a guarantee of the interest upon both bonds and stock, and that they would retire to Europe upon their laurels. Think of it—the Railroad Trust forcing such a thing upon the taxpayers of the country. The Money Trust forced the financial panic upon the country, in October, 1907, and brought woe and misery upon tens of thousands of innocent laborers and producers. Trusts control every industry in the country and all of its food products. I see in a late issue of your paper where the Steel Trust is now attempting to coerce the incoming special session of Congress to revise the tariff, into not lowering the duties upon steel, etc., by threats of cutting the wages of its thousands of laborers, in the event the tariff affecting its interests are lowered. Hope you will keep up your fight against trust domination of our great country. It is high time that the people had a say-so as to tariff revision, control of trusts and railroads, and everything else pertaining to the interests of the country. J. W. GARDNER.

Cost of Funerals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I would like to call the attention of the public of St. Louis to the reason why undertakers get rich. It is simply because they charge $5 and $6 for a carriage when it is not worth a cent more than $3. I am under the impression that the poor people will have to be buried in an ash wagon or some such way. I know from experience, as I have followed this business for some twenty years, and have seen many cases. Not that alone, you can't buy a position as driver for these people. I used to make $12 to $14 a week as steady driver, but now everything is extra. If there is a funeral, you work; if there is not, you don't work, and when you do you are out in all kinds of sleet and rain, maybe, to drive from Baden to St. Peter's Cemetery for the small sum of 75 cents for a day's drive. I looked for work in other lines and owing to my gray hair, the employer is always ready to say: "I think you are most too old for this position." A. DRIVER.

HANDICAPPED.

WHISPERING STONE.

From the Saturday Evening Post.

Down in Show-Me Land they speak of him, with tears in their voices but none in their eyes, as Gum-Shoe Bill, but here in Washington we get a little closer to the march of progress and call him Rubber-Tired William.

It used to be said of the late Senator Allison of Iowa that if somebody would build a piano keyboard from the Capital to Dubuque, Allison could walk all the way out on the keys and never strike a note. But Mr. Allison had nothing on Rubber-Tired William. He could walk all the way from Washington to Jefferson City on an omelet souffle and never dent the froth. The one thing Senator Stone cannot abide is noise. This playing politics with a brass-band accompaniment may suit others, and does, apparently, but not for Stone. S-s-s-h-h, for him—silence, but get the votes.

And he gets them. Last fall he fought it out with Joseph W. Folk for the primary nomination for Senator—fought it out to a finish that was so close that it was hard to tell, for a time, whether the gum shoe or the megaphone was rampant; but in the end the gum shoe won, the soft pedal predominated, the rubber tires made the other side tired. It was not so wide as the Eads Bridge nor so deep as the Log Cabin Club, as Mercutio says, but it was enough.

Thus, William Joel Stone is returned for another term as Senator from Missouri, returned to continue his marvelous art of noiseless speaking, to practice his famous specialty of elocution without either sound or fury. We have in the Senate many orators who can calliope through their paragraphs, and do; who emit loud cries, and who chase up and down the gamut of noise with heavy tread; but we have only one orator who orates without any perceptible disturbance of the atmosphere or any visible or audible exhibition of his declamatory powers except the occasional moistening of his lips, and he wears no whiskers to deceive you.

A hoarse whisper is a screech for Stone, a sibilant hiss, a loud and profound pronouncement. "Mr. President," he says, and trails off into a "whisp-sp-sp-sp-sh-sh-ush-sh-h." "Mr. Pres-sh-sh-sh sish-sish-sh-sh-ssh shis-s-s-s-s-s." And John Kean, sitting over on the other side, rises and says:: "Mr. President, I am listening intently, but I cannot hear the Senator from Missouri." Whereat the Senator from Missouri smiles genially at John Kean and continues: "S-h-i-s-h s-h-i-s-h s-s-s-s-s-ish-ish-s-u-s-h-h-h."

There was that time, last May, when after Senator La Follette had contributed 19 pounds of speech to the filibuster against the Aldrich Currency Bill in 18 hours—a trifle more than a pound an hour, which is going some, even for the Senator from Wisconsin—and had retired with the proud consciousness of a duty well pronounced, and full of milk shake, Senator Stone, rising negligently from his desk, whispered amiably: "Mr. President."

"I desire to discuss the conference report," he said to himself.

"I have not yielded the floor," replied Senator Aldrich tartly, who had been sitting there all night listening to Mr. La Follette's few extemporaneous remarks.

"Parliamentary inquiry," whispered Stone.

Well, Stone got the floor, but he hadn't been going a minute before Senator Clapp of Minnesota, the former Black Eagle of Fergus Falls, but now of St. Paul or Minneapolis, or both, remarked: "We cannot hear the Senator. I trust he will speak a little louder."

Mr. Stone appeared amazed. "The impression seems to have gone forth"—he obscured.

"I have no doubt the Senator is saying something important," put in Senator Scott of West Virginia, "but we cannot hear it."

Bestowing a kindly smile on Scotty, Stone again took up the whisper of his discourse. And he rambled—didn't he ramble—for six long hours, never once saying a word that could be heard five feet from where he stood.

There were cries of "Louder!" and many interruptions. Through it all Stone whispered imperturbably.

He has whispered his way up through the wrack of Missouri politics until he has a commanding place in that State. His fight for re-election to the Senate was the hardest he ever had, but he won it, which is what he went into it for. He is tall and thin and hawk-faced and silent. If he had to turn in a fire alarm he'd whisper it.

Rubber-tired? Sure! Sound-proofed in every direction. Language, you know, was made to conceal thought, and going one step further, Senator Stone's abiding thought is to conceal his language.

JUST A MINUTE.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Clark McAdams.

JOURNAL OF THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

FIRST ROUND—Time was called with all the members in their corners. The clerk led with the minutes of the last meeting, which were ducked by the House. Everybody sparred for wind, and the round closed without anything having happened.

SECOND ROUND—Mr. Simmons darted from his corner and slugged Mr. Fay. Mr. Fay went over backwards. Took the count. Minority claimed a foul. Referred to Committee on Claims.

THIRD ROUND—Everybody cautious. Gallery urged members to mix it. Mr. Gallagher hopped out with the Chesley Island pig census report on his shoulder. It was promptly knocked off, and there was a general riot. Mr. Brennan was warned for kicking in the clinches.

FOURTH ROUND—Mr. Fay led with a resolution to bring up the grade crossing bill. Resolution laid on the table, and four members of the Minority laid under the table. Mr. Hussey claimed foul. (Laughter.)

FIFTH ROUND—Fast round over committee reports. Mr. Troll cautioned for holding. In the heat of action somebody knocked the Chair over with a brick. Clerk called for sergeant-at-arms, but Chair sent out for six bricks and announced that it would take its own revenge.

SIXTH ROUND—Mr. McShane questioned the presence of a quorum, and the clerk was ordered to call the roll. Nine members answered under their desks, and the action resumed.

SEVENTH ROUND—A spectator claimed to have been hit with a slungshot. Referred to Committee on Public Safety. Mr. Wiedmer moved that the meeting adjourn on account of exhaustion. Motion carried, and a policeman came in.

WHAT ST. LOUIS COULD DO.

From Everybody's Magazine.

"What has St. Louis ever done besides beg more water of the Government?" asks John L. Mathews, after discussing the uses to which Europe puts its rivers, in the April number of Everybody's Magazine. "What means has it for handling river traffic, in case a man who owned a boat and found a cargo wished to load or to unload there? At its water front a short stretch of sloping stone-paved levee leads to the edge of the stream, where half a dozen or more ancient hulks are anchored to serve as 'wharf boats.' There is no correlated railway service. Freight that for some mysterious reason is to go by water, is teamed by mules down to the river and is dumped upon the levee. Negroes—the most costly power to be found—carry these bundles by hand or on trucks aboard the wharf boat, or upon the deck of the steamboat. Freight that comes by water must be laboriously dragged up the levee and distributed by wagon.

"Yet think what St. Louis might have. Suppose the Chamber of Commerce, with the permission of Congress and of the State Legislature and of the city government, decides to build a harbor, either on the Missouri side of the river or over in Illinois, in the intricate windings of Cahokia Creek. It issues bonds, digs the haven, erects quays, builds railway tracks along them, connects them with the belt and through railroads, leaves ample roadways for teaming, and provides warehouses and apparatus for hoisting and transfer. Then its merchants, no longer depending upon the ancient packets, or upon the covered barges of the old-time Crescent Line, have built for them at Pittsburg or Dubuque a fleet of broad, shallow, steel barges of the Rhine type, constructed to load in good seasons to eight feet, or to carry, with economy, on four and a half. To tow these, the merchants build steel stern or side-wheel towboats, also of the German or Austrian type of light draft and very powerful. Then they direct by rail into this haven the freight that their agents gather from the whole West and the whole of Illinois, and even from Chicago, load it upon their fleets, and send them away, safe, insurable, certain of arriving, to New Orleans and the Gulf and the outer world; and back from New Orleans come rich cargoes to be distributed to all the West. If that were done, the city would as surely see its trade expand from a third of a million, which it has now, to ten million tons a year, as Breslau, in Germany, has seen its own grow."

MRS. P.—Prize winners in Hetty Green $5000 contest will be announced Monday.

TEXAS.—High altitudes are bad for diseases of the heart and good for diseases of the lungs.

RAY.—X-ray treatment for charity patients at the hospital for skin diseases, Jefferson and Locust.

G. C. G.—Have a talk with the Pension Examiners, Room 203 old Postoffice Building, Third and Olive.

S. S.—There have been many announcements of cancer remedies, but removal is the only one recommended.

T. S. M.—Peroxide has certainly bleached switches for some persons. We don't know why it failed with you.

A. B. C.—You yourself have "misread." Your question was answered as also that of another A. B. C. Never sign a question "A. B. C."

C. A. B.—For records of persons transported to Australia, try writing Home Secretary Herbert John Gladstone, London, England.

F. M.—The increase in length of days is not noticeable immediately after Dec. 21, because it is only two or three minutes in the course of a week.

J. O. W.—One not a depositor pays a bank for New York draft ten cents on the $100. The charge on checks from out of town varies according to locality.

P.-D. READER.—When priest calls to administer the sacraments of holy eucharist and extreme unction, have in readiness a candle, a small glass of water and some blessed water.

YOUNG BRIDE.—For canary with a cold, you might try rubbing it with vaseline and put a little sugar on the vaseline, so that the bird will pick it. Keep sufficiently warm and out of drafts.

DIX.—For tan, mix an ounce of limewater, half ounce each of oil of jessamine and sweet almond oil; add five grains powdered borax. Apply freely to face, let dry on, then rub in a little cold cream.

T. T. W.—A pint bottle, apparently empty, in reality contains 11 grains of air. The same bottle would hold something more than 9000 grains of water, if water were poured into it in place of air. Water is, therefore, 840 times heavier than air.

S. A. G.—Scars not deep may be almost banished by gentle daily friction preceded by warm ablutions with bland soap and soft water. Massage and application of almond oil very slightly iodoretted have been recommended.

F. J. P.—Roosevelt was inaugurated in 1905, on Saturday, March 4, fell on Sunday the last time in 1904, and the next time will be in 1917. Presidential inauguration days occurred on Sunday in 1821, 1849, 1877 and will occur in 1917, 1945 and periodically thereafter.

READER.—Congress has conferred on the Philippine Government the power to guarantee bonds to the extent of 4 per cent on $100,000,000 for the construction of railways in the islands. Two branches of the 130-mile railway, between Manila and Dagupan (together about seventy miles) are to be constructed.

A. B. C.—To clean chamois: Never wash a chamois skin in warm water, for it will shrivel and render it unfit for further use. Use soft, cold water, using any good soap freely. Do not wring, but remove the stains and dirt by squeezing process. Never place it before a fire, over a register or steam pipes to dry. Stretch out and hang to dry gradually.

L. V.—Though it is advisable to administer, and generally necessary, still, in the matter of leasehold property held by widow, which is all deceased left, it might be dispensed with, all children agreeing and not desiring to disturb their mother's possession. When the lease expires have it renewed in the mother's name; children might quit-claim their interest to her as well.

CLARA B.—To garnishee she must sue for the debt, when you will be given an opportunity to set up a counter claim for services rendered her. Should judgment go against you then garnishee proceeding can be brought. The debt being for necessities furnished, you are liable; being a minor would not release you from such an account if reasonable.

READER.—As owner of chickens is required to keep them on his premises, a pigeon owner might be required to confine his pigeons. The pigeons in a city are a filthy nuisance and there ought to be a special ordinance against them. If they roost on your roof or gutters at night go up with a long pole and scare them off; they will never return. Or you might try imitation cats to frighten them away.

A. G.—To vulcanize rubber for small objects, sulphur chloride is dissolved in carbon disulphide in various proportions, according to degree of hardness the vulcanized object is to receive; the rubber cast is plunged in the solution and left there from 30 to 70 seconds. On removing, it is placed in a box or space warmed to 80 degrees F., and left long enough for the carbon disulphide to evaporate, or about 30 to 100 seconds. It is then washed in a weakly alkaline bath of water, and dried.

NEVA.—"A divorce has been granted a man in Illinois, giving him custody of his child. If the man remarry within the year, can the wife go into court and take child away from him?" This is a matter within the discretion of the judge who granted the divorce. He might, under the circumstances, be disposed to look favorably on an application of the mother for a modification of the decree, touching the custody of the child, and he might not. It would depend upon the evidence on which the divorce and custody were granted and on the judge's attitude toward violation of the Illinois law prohibiting the remarriage of a divorced person within a year. The only way to find out is to see the judge or file a petition for modification.

W. P. B.—To make green carnations, place carnation stems in aniline solution and the color will be absorbed. This was reported from Los Angeles Feb. 25, 1905; A. C. Stilson, No. 337 West Tenth street, has been trying for six years, in California and in the East, to produce a green carnation, and last month he succeeded. He refuses to explain how he did it, except that prepared soil is used. He is growing others like it, and has even sold a few at 10 cents each. But the flower will not be put on the regular market and the secret of Burbank is likely to remain with Mr. Stilson. Except for its stripes of green, the blossom is a duplicate of the ordinary white carnation. Green roses are known to horticulturists, but a green carnation is something new. Marion Harland says: "There are green roses and green carnations—and blue tulips—and divers other perversions of the orderly course of Flora's realm. I have seen a black rose. It was very pretty, but it was a [illegible]

Less Moonshine More Matrimony

After the Honeymoon, as Seen by a Writer for the Post-Dispatch.

By NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH.

THE bride surveyed the little apartment ruefully. It looked so new and she felt so very, very old and wise. They had been back from the honeymoon a whole month, and she began nearly every remark to the bridegroom with something like this: "Now, to me, a thoroughly sophisticated woman, it seems," which, of course, tickled the bridegroom very much, though he was far too diplomatic to let the bride see it.

NIXOLA GREELEY SMITH

For the twentieth time she had spent the afternoon rearranging the wedding presents and trying to make the apartment look something like the dream home she had seen so many times before her marriage. But again the conclusion was forced upon her that one might as well expect to make all the incongruous givers dwell together without a quarrel as to hope to harmonize those gifts.

So the bride sighed, but glancing with disapproval at the gilt and onyx clock on the mantelpiece, her face brightened again and she forgave it its conventional splendor for the tale it told, 5:30, and the bridegroom just 15 minutes away!

The bride found it very hard to understand that 15 minutes. For the bridegroom left his office at 5 o'clock and it never took him more than half an hour to get uptown. He had, to be sure, conscientiously explained it to her. It was occasioned by his going "across the street" to get a drink with another man and then having to return the compliment.

"Just imagine me keeping him waiting while I had tea with a girl!" she said to herself, drawing the deadly matrimonial parallel.

The bridegroom's ring broke in upon her discontented reflections. A moment later when she opened the door and held up her face to be kissed something that had never before been in the little apartment entered with the bridegroom. It was a well-defined causeless, utterly unmistakable grouch.

The grouch spoke in the bridegroom's perfunctory peck of greeting. It fairly clamored in the aloof way he stalked into the sitting room, his wife's slim arm across his unresponsive back.

"Won't you please wait until I get my coat off?" he said, with icy politeness.

The bride's arm dropped as if it had been suddenly broken.

"What's the matter?" she asked.

"Nothing the matter," replied the bridegroom resentfully, and he settled himself in an armchair under the electric light and began to read the paper.

As a matter of fact, nothing was the matter with the bridegroom that he knew of. He had had a row at the office, a man had jostled him in the subway and the bridegroom had threatened to punch his face. Also he had been invited to go to a prizefight and had declined out of consideration for the bride, and the consciousness of virtue made him extremely uncomfortable.

That he should sit down and read the paper in the quarter of an hour before dinner sacred to holding the bride on his knee and telling her everything that had happened during the day—all his adventures as she termed them—was unbelievable.

Looking at him as he sat there, the bride wondered how she could ever have thought such a monster of selfishness, ingratitude and brutality was a hero and a god. For the bride was a young person of extremes.

"These suffragettes make me sick!" remarked the bridegroom, looking up from the paper.

"Yes," answered the bride, "I suppose they do. Then she hurled the javelin. "I am one," she said.

The bridegroom laughed. He almost laughed himself out of his bad humor, for the idea of his fluffy little bride wanting a vote struck him as highly amusing.

"It's not a joke," continued the bride gravely, for she saw her advantage, and was bound to play the comedy out, "You were always so busy noticing my wavy hair and my big eyes and all those silly things. You never bothered about what was going on inside my head. But it's true, and I've promised to walk in the next parade they have. And I don't care what you think of it."

The bridegroom flung his paper away and stood up. He still would not quite believe that the bride was in earnest, but he was thoroughly alarmed. A suffragette in his home was vastly more important than a quarrel at the office, a row in the Subway or a prizefight that duty compelled him to forego.

"Just let me catch you walking in any parades!" he said, menacingly.

"Then, kiss me!" said the bride, who decided this brand-new and effective mode of torture had lasted long enough.

The bridegroom kissed her with fervor.

"Kiss me nicely!" she commanded.

There was no trace of the bridegrooms' grouch now. It had been startled out of him. He kissed the bride again.

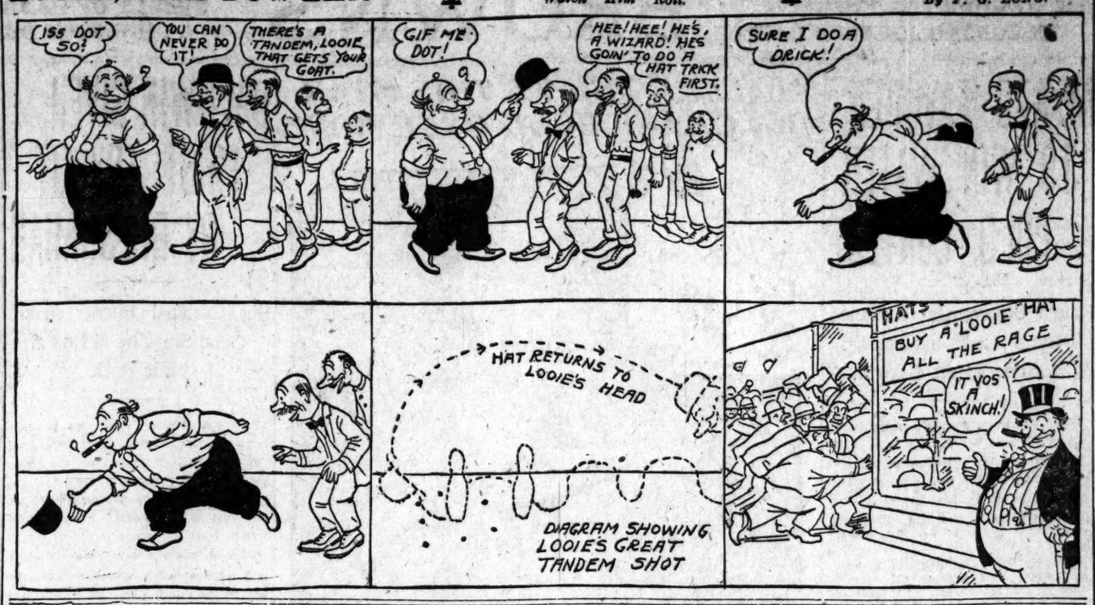

"Now," she asserted, "I am going to walk in a parade, too, and you are going with me. Dinner's ready. We'll parade to the dining room." And she slipped her hand through his arm.

And the "monster of selfishness, ingratitude and brutality" became a hero and a god once more.

Reviews of New Books

Critical Comment on the Latest Publications Written for the Post-Dispatch.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S group of stories on ancient English history, "Puck of Pook's Hill," have appeared in several magazines. The collection has been added to the flexible leather pocket edition of Mr. Kipling's work published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

Jean Webster's stories from the servants' hall of a wealthy American's home, "Much Ado About Peter," are rich in humor and careful drawing of character. (Doubleday, Page & Co.)

LOVERS of stories of plains life will find a genuine delight in "The Delafield Affair." Feud, politics and romance are woven skillfully into this spirited drama of New Mexico and, though the writer is a woman (Florence Finch Kelley), there is patent in every situation a man's knowledge of what a man would do under similar circumstances. The story is true to the soil from the beginning to the end. (McClurg.)

H. G. WELLS is always different. He clings to no convention of novel making—not even his own conventions. "Tono Bungay" is as quaint as the name. It is the story of a man whose mother was housekeeper for a family of wealth and station. He is educated beyond his station, has ideas of independence, whips the heir of the house and is sent to his uncle, a village druggist, who dreams of high finance. The druggist is the butt of the village jokes because of his dissatisfaction with local conditions and his airy plans. Forced out of his rut by bankruptcy, he makes all his dreams come true. He makes the hero his partner in the production and exploitation of a fake medicine called Tono Bungay, which contains harmless things in great quantity and a harmful drug in small quantity. The profits are enormous and are used in prompting many companies which come to one simultaneous crash because of the promoter's incapacity for real organization. But the chief interest of the story is not the patent medicine, but the hero's three love affairs: 1. A dull, conventional creature whom he idealizes and marries. 2. A frankly immoral girl who lasts for but a brief period as the object of his attention. 3. A daughter of the house his mother served, who loves him but will not marry him because of a black page in her life and a devotion to chloral or cocaine or something equally demoralizing. It is a first-person story and the autobiographer says he had in mind to name the story "Waste," which is the keynote. Each of the well-drawn characters loses the thing it lives for; every plan they work out produces a crop of rubbish; every love ends without fruition. (Duffield.)

"THE Climbing Doan," by Lawrence Ditto Young, is a thrilling and tragic story of treasure hunters in South America. There are other treasures besides metallic ones to give the story a romantic flavor and the whole is a fine mixture to con in a hammock.

"The City of Splendid Night" tells how a woman wins back her husband after she has deserted him and he has divorced her, married another woman and finally buried her. The first wife is hateful in his eyes and the story turns on her unique maneuvers to put him on his knees at her feet. John W. Harding is the author. (Dillingham.)

THERE is no other State in the Union so rich in romance as California, and many books have grown from this fertile field. But since the days of Bret Harte it is doubtful if there has been any that will equal "Mission Tales in the Days of the Dons." The stories are not all religious, as the title might suggest, but cover a wide range of California history and tradition. In a preface, the writer says the stories were told to her by pioneers. All, of course, have a Spanish flavor. (A. C. McClurg & Co.)

JEWELS FOR 1909

FEBRUARY'S birthstone, the amethyst, is the fashionable stone for 1909. It is pronounced by the prophet Zadkiel to be the "lucky stone."

If the love and friendship which the amethyst represents are of no account to wearers let them remember that it is also a charm against the evils of intoxication. Anyhow, the art jewelers have seized upon this Oriental superstition and set the stone in a myriad of designs which make it peculiarly lovely and attractive.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Jock Brookfield, a Louisville (Ky.) gambler, gives a supper at his rooms. His guests are his sister, Mrs. Campbell; his niece, Viola; his former sweetheart, Mrs. Whipple, and her son Clay (who loves Viola) and Frank Hardmuth, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney. Hardmuth proposes to Viola and is snubbed. Brookfield becomes aware of a subtle power he possesses whereby he can influence the gaze of others. He sees and is strangely interested in Justice Prentice, who explains to him this power. Denning, a rich spendthrift, comes to the house for a game of poker. Jack renews his old-time suit for Mrs. Whipple's hand. As he refuses to give up gambling, she rejects him. Clay, tormented by Denning, strikes the latter dead with a heavy paper knife. On trial Clay found guilty. Clay's mother appeals to Justice Prentice, who loved her mother and fought a duel in his youth because another man annoyed Clay's grandmother with a cutlery. A new trial is on when Brookfield charges Hardmuth with arranging the murder of Gov. Scovill. Clay is acquitted. Hardmuth tries to kill Brookfield, but is unable to pull the trigger when Brookfield tells him he cannot.

Chapter XVI (Concluded)

"ASK him to step up here," Brookfield ordered. He then went to the door of the dining room and called to his sister and Helen: "Justice Prentice is coming up and I'd like you to join us."

Lew was again affectionately regarding the five cards he had dealt himself.

"Can the old man call a hand like that, too?" he asked Brookfield.

"I'm sure he could," said Jack.

"And are there others?" Ellinger inquired, his sense of wonder at the trick overborne by sudden hopelessness.

"I believe there are a good many others who unconsciously have the same ability."

"Well, it's a God's blessing there's a sucker born every minute. I'm a widow and an orphan 'longside of that." Lew threw the cards on the table in disgust.

"Been losing, Mr. Ellinger?" Mrs. Campbell inquired, as she and Helen came into the room.

"Losing? I just saved fifteen thousand I was goin' to throw away like sand in a rat hole. I'm a babe eatin' spoon victuals, and only gettin' half at that." Lew sorrowfully replaced the check in his pocket.

The Justice came into the room.

"I stopped at your hotel, Mr. Justice," Jack said, "but you were out."

"Yes," Prentice explained, "I have been making a few partifig calls, and I stopped"——

The hurried entrance of Viola and Mrs. Campbell's exclamation at sight of her interrupted the Justice.

"Where's Clay?" Helen asked, with repressed excitement.

"Downstairs."

Viola greeted the Justice and turned to Brookfield, who excused himself to the others, and, stepping aside with his niece, inquired:

"Did the gentleman come with you?"

"Yes."

Ellinger overheard this reply, and his own nervousness added to the uneasiness of the group.

"Won't you ask Clay, my dear," Brookfield continued to Viola, "to take him through the lower hall and into the dining room until I'm at liberty?"

"Certainly." Viola left on her errand.

"I am keeping you from other appointments," Prentice said.

"Nothing that can't wait."

Brookfield offered him a chair, but the Justice declined it, and going to the ladies, he extended his hand.

"I am leaving for Washington in the morning."

"We shall all be at the train to see you off, Mr. Justice," said Brookfield.

"That's good, because I should like to say good-by to the young people—I can see them there. I shan't see you then, Mr. Ellinger?" Prentice crossed to where Lew was still standing by the three queens, gone but not forgotten. He extended his hand.

"Good-by, Mr. Justice," said Lew "you've given me more of a 'turnover' than you know."

"Really?"

"I'd 'a' haved two hundred thousand dollars if I'd met you 30 years ago."

"Well, that's only a little over six thousand a year, isn't it?"

"That's so; and, damn it, I have lived!" At this statement, and with the recollection behind it, there came into Lew's ruddy-duck smile that unctuous suggestion of good feeling which was peculiarly his own. The smile abided, and the retrospection grew during the succeeding moments in which the Justice was bidding farewell to the ladies and leaving Jack in the hallway.

As Jack returned, his sister, who had been looking into the dining-room, came quickly to him.

"Is that Hardmuth in there?" she asked, nodding over her shoulder.

"Yes," Jack answered.

"I don't care to see him."

"Very well, dear; I'll excuse you."

"Come, Helen." Mrs. Campbell left the room.

"I'd like you to stay," Jack said to Helen.

"Me?"

"Yes."

Left alone with Helen and Ellinger, Brookfield crossed to the dining-room door and opened it.

"Come in," he said.

Viola entered, followed by Hardmuth and Clay. In her excitement she had forgotten to lay off the fur coat which she had worn in the automobile. As Brookfield removed the coat from her shoulders he said to her:

"Your mother has just left us, Viola; you had better join her."

"Very well." As the girl started to go out her uncle took her hand, detaining her a moment.

"I want you to know, my dear, how thoroughly I appreciate your going on this errand for me. You're the right stuff!" Jack kissed her affectionately; Viola left the room.

Brookfield turned to Hardmuth, who was standing by the side of Clay. Hardmuth was haggard and had a hunted look. He wore a dark overcoat of some light material; in his hand he held the automobile goggles which Clay had given him. Brookfield found it difficult to put into speech the severity which he felt the situation demanded.

"You are trying to get away?" he began, interrogatively.

"This your note?" Hardmuth said, in reply, extending Brookfield's letter.

"Yes."

Hardmuth glanced at the page. "You say you will help me get out of the State?"

"I will."

"When?"

"Whenever you are ready."

"I'm ready now."

"Then I'll help you now."

"Now?" Ellinger cried out, in astonishment.

"Yes."

"Doesn't that render you liable in some way, Jack, to the law?" Helen said, anxiously.

"Yes; but I've been liable to the law in some way for the last 20 years." Brookfield turned to Clay. "You go down and tell the chauffeur to leave the machine and walk home; I'm going to run it myself, and I'll turn it in."

"Yes, sir." Clay left the room.

"You're going to run it yourself?" Hardmuth asked, with quick suspicion.

"Yes."

"Where to?"

"Across the river, if that's agreeable to you—or any place you name."

"Anybody waiting for you across the river?"

"No."

Again Harmuth extended Brookfield's letter. "Is this all on the level?"

"Completely."

"Why, I believe you mean that," Ellinger said, in perplexity to Jack.

"I do."

"But I've got something to say, haven't I?"

"I hope not." Brookfield's answer was full of authority.

"Well, if you're in earnest, of course," Lew apologized; "but I don't see your game."

"I'm not fully convinced of Mr. Hardmuth's guilt."

"Why, he's runnin' away!"

"I know what a case they would make against me," Hardmuth blustered; "but I'm not guilty in any degree."

"Frank," Brookfield sternly interrupted, "I want to do this thing for you; don't make it too difficult by any lying. When I said I wasn't fully convinced of your guilt, my reservation was one you wouldn't understand." He crossed to the mantel and pushed the electric button. Clay had entered the room while he was speaking, and stood respectfully waiting to report. Brookfield now inquired of the boy:

"Is he gone?"

"Yes."

"My coat and goggles?"

"Below in the reception room," Clay said.

"Thank you. I wish now you would go to Viola and her mother, and keep them wherever they are."

"All right, sir." Clay left the room; Brookfield turned to Hardmuth.

"Hungry?"

"No, thank you."

"Got money?"

"Yes."

The darky boy came in answer to the bell. "Jo, take Mr. Hardmuth below and lend him one of the fur coats." And then to Hardmuth, "I'll join you immediately."

Hardmuth followed the boy from the room.

Again left alone with Ellinger and Helen, Brookfield turned to Lew and said:

"Lew, I called that ace of hearts, didn't I?"

"And the three queens," Lew answered, with reminiscent regret.

"Because the three queens and the ace were in your mind."

"I don't see any other explanation."

"But suppose instead of the cards there had been in your mind a well-developed plan of assassination—the picture of a murder"——

"Did you drop to him that way?"

"No; Raynor told me all I know of Hardmuth. But here's the very hell of it." It was evident to Helen that Brookfield's mental agony was unfeigned. "Long before Scovil was killed I thought he deserved killing, and I thought it could be done just as it was done."

"Jack!" Helen exclaimed, in a whisper.

"I never breathed a word of it to a living soul, but Hardmuth planned it exactly as I dreamed it, and, by God, a guilty thought is almost as criminal as a guilty deed! I've always had a considerable influence over that poor devil that's running away tonight, and I'm not sure that before the Judge of both of us the guilt isn't mostly mine."

In her wish to diminish Brookfield's mental suffering, Helen sympathetically took his hand. "That's morbid, Jack, dear," she urged—"perfectly morbid."

"I hope it is; we'll none of us ever know in this life." He turned to Ellinger. "But we can all of us"——

"What?" asked Lew, as Brookfield paused.

"Live as if it were true." With an effort Brookfield threw off the somberness of his mood and prepared for action. "I'm going to help him over the line. The roads are watched, but the police won't suspect me, and they won't suspect Lew, and all the less if there is a lady with us." He turned again briskly to Ellinger. "Will you go?"

"The limit," the old sport answered, in characteristic phrase.

"Get a heavy coat from Jo."

"All right."

"Anybody waiting for you across the river?"

"No."

Brookfield was left alone with Helen. He turned to where she was sitting at one end of the library table. The hour, the lighting of the room, their relative positions recalled with photographic vividness their conversation on the night of the opera, the conversation in which he had received the first hint of the power of which he had since become so responsibly conscious, and which had worked such regeneration in his life. He put one hand over her hand, resting on the table as it had rested then.

"You know you said I used to be able to make you write to me when I was a boy at college?"

"Yes."

"And you were a thousand miles away while this fellow Hardmuth was just at my elbow half the time."

Helen rose quickly and came to him close. "It can't help you to brood over it, Jack."

He took both her hands in his, laying them upon his breast in the protective and tender way that had grown upon him.

"It can help me to know it and make what amends I can. Will you go with me while I put this poor devil over the line?"

"Yes, I'll go with you," she answered at once. She turned and got from the sofa the great coat that Viola had worn.

Brookfield took it from her and held it, assisting her to put it on. As he hooked the chain fastening of the collar under her chin, he said:

"Helen, you stood by your boy in the fight for his life."

"Didn't you?"

Brookfield looked pleadingly into the eyes of the woman he loved. "Will you stand by me," he asked, "while I make my fight?"

She answered simply: "You've made your fight, Jack—and you've won."

RHEUMATISM makes a man lose courage. It is almost impossible to work while racked with pain.

Sloan's Liniment

gives relief at once, stops the pain, quickens the blood and draws out all stiffness and soreness. You don't need to rub — it penetrates.

Mr. J. P. EVANS, Mt. Airy, Ga., says: "I suffered with rheumatism for three years. One leg was badly swollen from my hip to my knee. I used Sloan's Liniment and it cured me well and sound. One-half bottle took all the pain and swelling out."

THE FOEMAN.

DURING a strike in the coal mines of West Virginia some years ago, apprehension on the part of the State authorities led to the calling out of the militia. There was really no trouble, but the situation was tense, and bloodshed was looked for at any moment.

One day a soldier in uniform, off duty, was strolling through the main street of the town wherein the greatest violence was feared, when he was surrounded by a crowd of strikers.

"Honest, now, Bill," asked one of the men of the militiamen, "would you fire at your fellow men?"

"No, I wouldn't," promptly replied the man in uniform. "I never shot at anyone in my life, and I ain't goin' to do it now."

The crowd cheered, and someone invited the militiaman to have a drink, an invitation which he accepted with alacrity. When he had satisfied his thirst, the question was put:

"If you are in sympathy with the strikers, why did you answer the call to come here?"

"I ain't said I was in sympathy with the strikers," was the unexpected rejoinder of the man in uniform.

"But you said you wouldn't shoot at a miner; that's the same thing," protested one of the men.

"Well, fellers," said the uniformed one, after a moment's hesitation, "to tell you the truth, I never carried a gun in my life. The fact is I play the cornet in the band."—Harper's Weekly.

Fashions for the Baby.

By Grace Margaret Gould.

PERHAPS the young mother may think that when she comes to make clothes for her baby she won't have to worry her head very much as to what's the fashion of the day, says Grace Margaret Gould in the Woman's Home Companion. Perhaps she thinks that baby clothes are always the same. If she does, she is a very mistaken little lady, for clothes for the littlest folks show from time to time many of the innovations which make the garments for grown-ups in the mode. This is especially so this spring. Even the long dresses for infants show the princess and empire lines, and sleeves have diminished greatly in size. The vogue for hand embroidery is also emphasized in baby clothes; not only is it used on the little dresses, but on the long cloaks and the dainty little flannel wrappers and sacques. It goes without saying that if baby's mother is the sensible little woman that she is quite sure to be, baby will have no frills and furbelows on his clothes. Simplicity is the fashion today. And baby clothes reflect the trend of the modes. Generally speaking, the distinction between baby's every-day clothes and his dresses for best wear is merely in the quality of the fabric. When baby is expected to look his finest his dress is of the sheerest of nainsook, lawn or longcloth, and sometimes washable cotton chiffon.

PRIZE AWARDS MONDAY.

THE prize letters in answer to the question: "How would you spend $5000 a day," will be printed on this page Monday. So many letters were received that the work of going over them has occupied the judges a longer time than was anticipated. Many elaborate schemes of philanthropy were submitted and the prize letters are fairly typical.

Appendix and Athletics.

THE Deutsche Medicinisch Wochenschift does not indorse that current notion that indulgence in athletic sports increases the tendency to appendicitis. Quite the contrary; but it admits that those who have once had an attack must avoid violent exercise for a time.

KETCHEL GIVING AWAY TOO MUCH FOR HIM TO HOPE FOR VICTORY IN COMING JOHNSON BATTLE BROWNS SHOW BIG IMPROVEMENT AS A RESULT OF HARD PRACTICE AT HOUSTON DURING PAST WEEK SPORT

McALEER'S MEN LOSE KINKS IN THROWING ARMS

Practice of Present Week Takes Soreness Out of Wings of Hospital Corps.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 20.

JIMMY McALEER'S squad of ball players was divided early this morning and sent in quest of shekels to help pay for their board while they are down here training for the coming pennant race in the American League. Manager James had 11 of the younger players aroused from their slumbers at an early hour and after being fed, they were hurried off on a train for Galveston, where they are to perform today and tomorrow. The elder players, or rather, the regulars, remained in Houston for two games on the same two days, with the Houston club.

Harry Howell was sent as manager of the Galveston squad and he had Rube Waddell with him as chief attraction as well as first baseman. Jimmy Stephens was on the job a catcher and Edlick, Swift and Bailey were named for the pitchers. Griggs, Hartzell and Crum were to make up the infield, with Rube and Harry and McAleese, with one of the extra pitchers were to take care of the outer garden.

McAleer announced he would try to play his regular team against the Houston club, and it was to be the first time this year that all the regulars were in their places at the same time. Tom Jones, Williams, Wallace and Ferris were picked for the infield and Stone, Hoffman and Schweitzer were to play in the outfield. It was thought likely Stone might have to give it up, for he is still weak from his recent sickness, but if possible he will play part of the time. Lou Criger and Smith were left here for the catchers and the pitching was to be taken care of by Graham, Pelty and Justus.

The entire squad was driven to the limit of endurance at both the morning and afternoon practice sessions yesterday. The weather was the hottest yet experienced in the camp and McAleer had the boys jumping every minute of the time set aside for work. They were out early for morning stunt and at half past 2 in the afternoon all were on hand once more. There was no halt until 15 minutes before 5 o'clock, and the boys then jogged back to the hotel thoroughly exhausted from the day's exercise.

The Browns have taken on quite a different aspect during the past week. At this time last Saturday it was all a jumble. There was not a pitcher who could break an egg against a barn. The infielders were all sore and sick. The outfielders were not hitting and the whole squad was limp from the early practice. Now it has settled down to the grind. The sore arms have for the most part disappeared. There are few wild throws in the infield practice. The batting improvement in seven days time has been marvelous and the whole squad has begun to take on the characteristics of a championship team.

George Stone's Weak Throwing Arm Due to Early Mistake

THE secret of George Stone's weak throwing arm has been discovered. Every one who knows baseball knows George to be a wonderful hitter and baserunner and a first-class fielder. His one weakness has been his throwing arm, and all agree that if he had an arm like Cobb he would be as great a light in the baseball world as the Tiger star.

George's weak throw is the result of accident. It was caused by misguided youth. If George had been under the watchful eye of a competent baseball man when a boy he might be able to hurl the ball from the outfield to the home plate today with as much speed as Hoffman or Schweitzer. But the chances are that he would be using his right arm instead of his left.

When George first began playing baseball as a schoolboy he had the unique gift of being able to throw equally well with either arm. But when he went to bat he always was left-handed. He used his right arm when writing his lessons in the schoolroom, and because his mother didn't watch him carefully at the table he ate with his left, which trait still is with him today.

After school hours he always joined the boys in a game of ball. They all wanted him because he was a good batter. He didn't possess a glove of his own and some of the boys had to lend one to him when he played in the field. There were left-handed and right-handed gloves in service and George made the mistake of taking whichever one was nearest to him.

If he got a left-handed glove, he would throw with his right arm. If he picked up a glove for the right hand, he would use his left to throw the ball. Possibly he picked up the glove for the right hand more than the left, for in time he became addicted to habit of using his left always to throw and the chances are he picked the wrong arm. Had he picked his right, he might have been able to have developed it as much as any of them and be a strong thrower today. But he chose the left and he himself is of the opinion today that he made a mistake, but knows it's too late now to change.

"I've thought of it many times since I have taken up baseball professionally," said George. "Of course, I never expected to be a ball player in those days or I might have been more careful in my early work.

"But the more I think of it, the more I believe that had I used my right arm all the time in early years, I would have been able to develop a strong throw the same as other players. A friend of mine who has studied this question tells me it is impossible for any one to develop both arms to the same degree.

"From what I can remember of my early throwing, I could throw just as well with my right as my left. But because I always wanted to bat left-handed, I decided I would also throw that way, so began using nothing but the left.

"I used to pitch some when quite a youngster and that was when I was trying to work up speed with my left. But I never got it. My arm doesn't seem to be weak at all. But I have wished many times that I had tried my right as a throwing arm and the more I think of it, the more I feel that I would have been able to have developed the same speed that others have."

BEEL CHOICE IN INDOOR FEATURE

The one mile runs, in which some of the best known distance runners in the city will compete, will be the feature event on the program for the dual athletic meet between the Central Y. M. C. A. and Central High School track teams, to be decided at the Central Y. M. C. A. this evening. At least five of the men who will compete must be credited with almost an even chance to win. The same fields are entered for both events.

Frank Habig, captain of the Central Y. M. C. A. track team, is the most experienced runner in the event, but Habig has not been at his best for some time. Edwin Beel has the speed and endurance and is generally favored to bring home the prize for the Central Y. M. C. A. G. J. Norsch is another Y. M. C. A. man who has quite a record for the distance events. Powers will be Central Highs' mainstay. Brigham is another boy who has been able to get over the ground for a mile or two at a fast clip.

While it is generally expected that one of the Central Y. M. C. A. men will finish in front, the race should develop into an exciting contest.

The other events on the program are as follows: 25-yard dash, 25-yard low hurdles, 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard dash, 880 yards and one mile runs and high jump.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Chicago will have full charge of the stock chassis road race, to be run for the Cobe trophy. The Chicago Automobile Club has decided to make the event for the West, and has advanced the dates to [illegible] 18.

KNIGHT FOULS TOM SULLIVAN

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 20.—"Brooklyn" Tommy Sullivan of St. Louis was given the decision on a foul over Phil Knight of Leavenworth last night in the third round of what was to have been a 10-round bout. While the foul was palpably an ugly one and gained the decision for Sullivan the moment it was struck, there is small probability that Knight intended to end the fight in that manner.

Up until this time the contest was one of the best that ever has been seen in Kansas City. Against Sullivan's thorough knowledge of the game was pitted the aggressiveness of a youngster with a wallop capable of gaining results. Knight simply lost his head in an endeavor to win.

WASSEM AND CHRIST TO ARRANGE WRESTLING BOUT

Al Wassem and Mike Christ, the two best lightweight wrestlers in the city, will get together next Wednesday night at the Columbian A. C. and see if they cannot reach an agreement to wrestle. Christ belongs to the Columbian A. C., the members of which want him to wrestle Wassem. Wassem is a member of the South Broadway A. C. Christ has practically consented to wrestle Wassem. Tomorrow afternoon Wassem wrestles Gus Eisel, a welterweight, at the Rock Springs Turner Hall.

TOLEDO, O., March 20.—John Billeter, lightweight champion wrestler, defeated Walter Dmochowski of Detroit in two straight falls here last night. First fall in 16 minutes 13 seconds; second in 16½ minutes.

M. A. C. FAVORED TO WIN WATER POLO CONTEST

Rough Engagement Expected When St. Louis and Chicago Swimmers Meet Tonight.

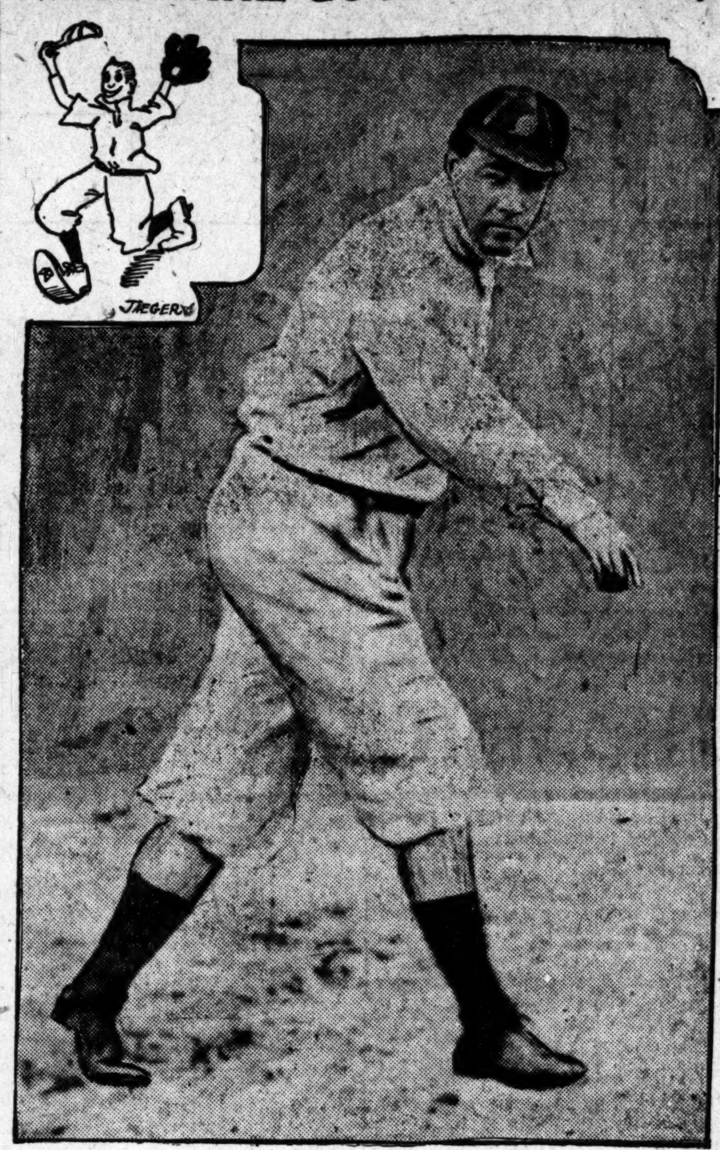

When swimmers from the Missouri A. C. and Chicago A. A. meet in a series of events at the Missouri A. C. this evening one of the best aquatic meets ever held in St. Louis is expected. The water polo game and relay race will undoubtedly prove to be the feature events.

The Chicago A. A. team is the champion water polo aggregation of the country for the reason that their old rivals for the title, the New York A. C. gave up the game on account of roughness.

On form the Missouri A. C. team figures to give the Chicago men a hard battle, as the wearers of the Cherry Diamond only a short time ago met the Chicago team in Chicago and after a desperately contested game lost 1 to 0. On that occasion Dr. Davis, one of the strongest players of the M. A. C., was unable to get into the game. August Goessling, another one of the M. A. C.'s stars, was in anything but the best of trim for the meet and consequently was unable to put up his best battle. All of the M. A. C. men are on edge for the fray this evening and will, without doubt, give the C. A. A. six the hardest kind of a battle.

The relay race also promises to be an excellent one. The Cherry Diamond will have Otto Schwarz and Marquard Schwarz, both in good trim. These two swimmers are about the fastest in the country when they are right, but it is hard to get them to train. George Hall and Gwynne Evans are two other men who will take part in the relay.

McALEER THINKS THIS STAR WILL MAKE GOOD ONCE MORE

DINNEEN BROWNS

Johnson's Big Weight Handicap Will Help Him Batter Down Ketchel's Hope

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

NEW YORK, March 20.—It takes some stretch of imagination to see the giant Johnson lying senseless on the floor while Stanley Ketchel, middleweight champion, stands grinning over him. But in the history of the ring things just as strange have happened.

Ketchel is the prototype—the reincarnation—of Bob Fitzsimmons, and no one questions for a moment that Fitzsimmons, in his prime, could have knocked Johnson cold in a few rounds. Ketchel is like Fitzsimmons in the fact that he hits a terrific blow with his left hand and has a first-class right. He has mastered the "shift" until it is as natural to him as it ever was to freckled Bob. He is game and young and strong, and he weighs as much as Fitzsimmons did when he fought Jim Corbett for the world's championship and won.

Ketchel isn't quite as tall as Fitzsimmons. In shifty cunning the Cornishman was a better man. And shiftiness and cunning go a long way in aiding a small man matched against one 40 pounds heavier. Ketchel doesn't depend upon cunning as Fitzsimmons did, but rather prefers sudden rushes and continuous mauling with either hand as the openings come.

Johnson will have an immense advantage in size and weight. He has another thing that is just as important. Being a world's champion has given him a "swelled head"—in plain terms, self-conceit and confidence. He won't be the cringing, apologetic, yellow-streaked fighter that backed away from Marvin Hart and feared to stand up to the gaff long enough to put his weight into a punch. Johnson has the best substitute for gameness—a head filled with the idea that, being a real champion, he is better than any man he meets.

JOHNSON POSTS $5000 HE DEFEATS KETCHEL

CHICAGO, March 20.—Jack Johnson today posted $4000 more, and now has up $5000 for a side bet in the proposed battle with Stanley Ketchel.

Jack ran into Frank Gotch, while Jack was posing his money. Gee! You talk easily in those big figures, Jack," the wrestler, remarked with a broad smile, as he glanced over the plethoric roll of bills in the black man's hand.

"It wasn't always that way, you know," Jack retorted, "but I am trying my best to look unconcerned about it. You're no stranger to big bank rolls."

"Well, if it was in Iowa farm land I might be able to think about it more coolly," the wrestler replied.

Ketchel has a chance to land a knockout—but not enough of a chance to get any of my money when it comes to wagering on the match. He is up against too hard a handicap. He may win, but the chances are against him.

WITH Jack O'Brien it is different. Here is a man not much heavier than Ketchel. He is a dancing master and can run away like Arthur Duffey breaking a record. His chances of staying 10 rounds with Ketchel lies in his footwork.

In one way it is too bad that a club with the standing of the National A. C. has put on a notorious faker like O'Brien. The only excuse for it is that Ketchel is likely to give him a good beating—a thing that would be enjoyed by every follower of honest sport in America. O'Brien's notorious faking, his hypocritical "confession" in which he tried to excuse his own crookedness by charging squarer men—even Jeffries—with similar crimes against sport, long ago disgusted the whole country to such an extent that O'Brien is barred from reputable boxing clubs all over the East and the West. O'Brien has admitted that he made a "business" of double-crossing his friends and arranging crooked fights from his novice days until he was caught with the goods in Los Angeles and practically thrown out of the profession.

There is only one excuse for the O'Brien-Ketchel match, as I said before, and that is that Ketchel, being honest, can't be bought up by O'Brien, and will fight for a knockout.

Here's to O'Brien. We don't wish him any hard luck. May he wake up when the referee has counted a couple of hundred.

A CORRESPONDENT asks: "How much did Abe Attell get for fighting Patsy Klein?"

Well, old chap, Abe got just $1000 more than he deserved. He got $1000, and got it before he entered the ring. A sporting man known to everyone in New York came down from Abe's dressing room just before the fight and whispered some interesting information. "Abe got his money and sent it home, and Klein is to go the 10 rounds," said the sporting agent.

That's just what happened. As an all-around, plain sewing or fancy stitch faker Abe Attell has few equals and no superiors. Abe's ring work is so crooked that he often meets himself coming into the ring just as he steps out of it to go back to the dressing rooms.

Abe Langtry Resigns Secretaryship of A. B. C.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 20.—Right on the heels of the finish of the American Bowling Congress tournament, which has lasted three full weeks, Secretary Abe Langtry, the Milwaukee man who has proved a splendid executive the past two years in handling both the Cincinnati and Pittsburg tournaments, mailed President Robert H. Bryson of Indianapolis his resignation, to take effect May 1. The announcement came like a bolt from a clear sky and the local officials here, along with the few A. B. C. officials, are urging the big fellow to reconsider his action.

Langtry has talked every year of pulling out of the A. B. C. secretaryship, but he has been so warmly supported by his fellow officials that he has not felt like withdrawing. This year, however, he found the duties of his office so onerous that he finally crystalized his determination.

The bowlers are still confident that the executive committee will be able to induce Langtry to withdraw his resignation. They do not relish losing the services of Garry Herrmann as president and Langtry as secretary at the same time, as both men have the confidence of the bowlers as no other two men in the country.

Martin Kern of St. Louis won the international championship yesterday when he got an average of 194 7-9 for nine games, defeating A. W. Engler of Chicago and J. C. Sebring of Cincinnati, Canadian champion. Kern won the championship of the Middle West Bowling Association last year. Engler won the championship of the A. B. C. last year.

Miss Birdie Kern, daughter of Martin Kern, loses out on the national women's championship, as Mrs. Reilly of Chicago wins the title with a score of 565. Her games were 186, 190 and 189. Miss Kern takes second prize with a score of 524, and Mrs. Lang of St. Louis third with 483.

The De Soto Stars of St. Louis, champions of the Middle West, proved a disappointment in the international championship event. The team got off in the lead on the first three games bowled Wednesday night, but because of the poor bowling of Homer Sanders and Charley Stokes Thursday night and last night the team finished third with a total of 7718. The Brunswicks, Metropolitan champions, won with a total of 8097. The Bonds, champions of the A. B. C. last year, finished second with a total of 7735 pins.

Lewis Is High Gun.

Four scores over the 40 mark, out of a possible 50, were registered by policemen from the Seventh District in the practice revolver shoot on the Chestnut Street Police Station range yesterday. Lewis, with a 48 score out of a possible 50, was high. Quinn got a 44 score; Hancock and Sippel, 43 each. The men fire five shots at a target 36 feet away, a perfect shot counting 10. The men from the Eighth District will shoot today.

SOCIETY WOMEN TO SHOW PETS AT COMING DOG SHOW

Some very swagger dogs will be exhibited by some very swagger society women at the coming bench show, in the Coliseum, April 7 to 10, inclusive, and to induce as many entries as possible some of the leading gentlemen dog fanciers have offered valuable and attractive prizes, and they don't care if every one of them is won by a representative of the fair sex.

Miss Gladys Gale, Miss Hazel Carr, Mrs. Horace Rumsey, Miss Debbie Ware, Mrs. Dan Garrison, Mrs. Arthur Lambert, Mrs. L. D. Cabanne, Mrs. George F. Baker and many others are getting their pets in order to send them to the show.

Special prizes have been offered by Messrs. August A. Busch and William J. Lemp, by James H. McTague, who gives the $100 Maryland Hotel cup; by Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney, who give a valuable cup for the best local Irish setter; by Sam C. Davis, who wants to compensate the best Airdale; by Bud Dozier, who has offered a prize for the best sky terrier and Airdale; by Harry B. Hawes, who dotes on beagles; by Dinks L. Parrish and G. Lacy Crawford and by other gentlemen sportsmen.

"Jell" Wins and Loses.

The only special match that will be played on the tournament alleys today will be between Glen Riddell of New York and Gilbert of Cleveland, best six out of 11 games for a $300 purse. A. C. Jellison of St. Louis won a special match from Fitzharris of Pittsburg and one from William Fette of Wheeling. Jellison also won and lost a match to Alex Dunbar of Philadelphia.

BALDWIN GIVEN FIRST TRYOUT BY BRESNAHAN

Big Cardinal Pitcher Makes Good Showing in Box at Little Rock.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 19.—Baldwin, the enigma of the Cardinal twirling staff, went out on the firing line yesterday, the first time that he has been given an opportunity to do anything except warm up since he struck training camp.

Baldwin has not been ready to go in and work and Manager Bresnahan did not try to hurry him. He wanted the recruit to be in shape when he got his try-out. Today Baldwin said that he was ready and was sent to the mound. He got away with his first inning in big league company without being scored upon. Then the drizzle which had been falling for several minutes began to thicken and the game was stopped.

Baldwin is a big, raw-boned young fellow, who looks as though he ought to make a pitcher. He was decidedly nervous when he went into the box. However, it was only natural that he should be skittish in his first appearance with the big show.

After Gilbert had popped to Enright and Osteen grounded to Koney, Bresnahan worked Baldwin for a pass. Murdoch then singled, but Medwetzsky hit to Enright, who tossed Murdoch out at second. Baldwin will get another chance, perhaps today.

Forest More, pitching for the Bresnahans, was found for more runs in that one first inning today than he has yielded in all his apearances heretofore. The regulars seemed to have recovered their lost batting eyes and they pounded Forest for four hits and three runs.

After it began to rain, Boss Roger set the men to work with the football. There is little danger of their taking cold while engaged in this gentle pastime.

WRAY'S COLUMN.

HANS WAGNER has signed to play with Pittsburg again, despite all the rumors that he would not. The mere fact of his renewing his connection with the Pirates is inconsequential, for it was all but a matter of course that this would happen. The fact may be interesting in Cleveland, however, as it will serve to give Larry Lajoie another opportunity to dispute Wagner's right to the title of champion baseball player of the world.

Since Lajoie began what appears to be his declining period as a baseball star most of us have thought that Wagner was entitled to the honors of champion at the diamond game—sweeping though such an honor may seem. There was a time when Lajoie was given equal credit with "Hans," and the honor virtually lay between the pair. One critic has it that Ty Cobb has a look-in for consideration. But it seems hard to class Lajoie, even in his heyday, with the versatile Mr. Wagner. There is little on the diamond that Wagner cannot do and do well. This player has filled, at different times, almost every important post on or about the diamond and has made good at all of them. He was all but peerless as an outfielder, as a shortstop and as a first baseman. In whatever position he has served for any considerable space of time he has been at the top. He is the best hitter in the National League and is second in fielding in the country probably only to our own Wallace. On the bases he is, as ever, a wonderful runner and an intelligent one.

The Best Last Season.

IN last year's showing he is certainly entitled to the palm of champion, despite Ty Cobb's hitting and baserunning. But the real test of a championship player should not be excellence in one little sphere. Any outfielder is expected to hit, field and run bases. Some do the little stunt better than others. But Wagner does all that Ty Cobb does and other and greater things besides. He does many more stunts and all of them better, on last year's showing, than Larry Lajoie.

Possibly players who have been more competent, in their times, than Wagner have existed. But the only measure of baseball ability that is worth consideration is the present one. We know that the game is faster, harder and more scientific and one may therefore reasonably conclude that the star player of today has something on the men of earlier times, and that, therefore, Wagner represents the highest degree of baseball efficiency yet attained by any individual.

This does not mean that he was the man of all others who meant more to the success of any one club than any other player in history. But it does mean that no player, past or present, could do so many things and so efficiently as Hans Wagner.

Even if he was a hold-out man.

NOW comes Oliver (Pat) Tebeau, who deposes that the foul strike rule has done one great thing for the world of baseball in that it has given pitchers, old and semi-wornout pitchers, a new lease on life.

"The foul strike rule," said Pat yesterday, while passing upon things baseball, "is keeping men like Cy Young and Bill Dinneen in the game long past the period when their usefulness would have expired under previous conditions. Of course the good batters will always be able to avoid wasting strikes on fouls or bad balls. But the average hitter is prone to get himself into trouble by getting two strikes on himself through fouls, while attempting to hit bad ones. This is an immense saving to a pitcher's arm. Furthermore, the spitball has stepped in to the aid of the old ones, and I understand that even old Cy sometimes works in the moist curves on opposing batsmen."

"But it has been supposed that the spitball was hard on a twirler," a listener interjected.

"A big mistake. The spitball does not even involve the strain that is used in delivering the ordinary curve ball. It depends for its efficiency on the 'break' that results from the fingers slipping off the top of the ball. More force is used and I can't see any reason for believing it harmful. However, leaving it entirely out of consideration, the baseball rules, today, are conducive to long life of pitchers, and the short life of other players. The extreme speed required on the bases of all other players than boxmen, the necessity of keeping every position covered to the best possible maximum, makes it certain that the least slowing up will result in replacement. Extraordinary baseball brains keep a few old ones in the infield. It is the brains department of the game that will have to be developed if the infielders of the future wish to retain 15-year leases on jobs."

MOTOR NEWS AND GOSSIP

By NELSON T. GUTELIUS.

Lester Weiss of the Mississippi Valley Automobile Co., has sold a Detroit electric to E. B. Pryor, vice-president of the Wabash Railroad Co., and a machine of the same make to J. M. Cates.

The South Side Auto Co. has about completed a 50-foot addition to its garage at 2339 S. Grand avenue. This was necessary to accommodate the increase of business that this company is securing from South Side motorists.

Pathfinding Car Leaves New York.

The first active step in the New York-Seattle endurance contest is being taken Saturday, when the pathfinding car will leave New York.

Through the courtesy of Mr. E. L. Thomas, the Thomas car, which won the New York to Paris race, has been placed at the disposal of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition authorities. The car will be driven by George Miller, who acted as mechanic in the previous contest, and is scheduled to leave New York on Saturday at noon on its 4000-mile journey.

Representing the press and to note both the route and the condition of the roads, Mr. L. W. Redington will accompany the car.

The route that the car will follow is from New York to Poughkeepsie and Albany, thence through Schenectady, Rochester and Buffalo to Erie and Cleveland. At Cleveland a modification of the original route will be made and a more southerly path tried. This will lead through Indianapolis and St. Louis, and thence to Kansas City and Denver.

Pullmans to Accompany Glidden Tour.

As has already been announced the Glidden tour will start from Detroit, July 6. It is understood that the automobile manufacturers of that city have entered 15 cars.

Chairman F. B. Hower of the contest board, left for Chicago on Tuesday for the purpose of making arrangements with the railroads for hauling the train of Pullmans which will accompany the tour to furnish accommodations for the tourists at night stops between the large cities. Arrangements have already been made for the use of enough Pullman sleepers and dining cars to accommodate 300 or more tourists, but the negotiations for hauling the train from point to point remain to be taken up during this visit of the chairman to Chicago.

The St. Teresas and St. Augustines soccer elevens are scheduled to clash in a game at Zimmerman's Park tomorrow afternoon. Play will be started at 3 o'clock.

EARLY RALLY SENDS UP WALL STREET ISSUES

Marked Advance Shown in Northern Pacific and Great Northern Securities.

WEAKNESS IN STEEL

Effect of Telegraph Strike in France, Tariff Revision and Talk of Wage Cuts.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Evening Sun in its financial review today says:

"Although the stock market opened this morning at slight declines from yesterday's closing figures, upon the theory that securities in the last few days had perhaps responded somewhat too generously to the cheerful sentiment engendered by the introduction of the Payne tariff bill in Congress last Wednesday, before the close of the first hour there had been a rally which sent a majority of the issues up two points above today's opening and in many cases above the point to which they had been forced by the mild bear drives started at the very close of the market yesterday.

"Among the securities to show a marked advance in the somewhat stationary and dull Saturday half day market were Northern Pacific and Great Northern, both of which at one time in the middle of the short session showed gains of more than a point over yesterday's closing prices.

"As United States Steel common made no advances while Great Northern was rising, some traders endeavored to explain the different attitudes of those stocks on the assumption that the railroad would derive some advantage in its ore contract with the steel corporation, even under the present proposed cut in tariff duties upon steel products. The weakness in steel was attributed largely to reports from the south that the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., which was absorbed by the United States Steel Corporation in the course of business during the panic of 1907 would, on April 1, shut down practically its entire plant from sheer lack of business.

Rumor of Death.

"Although no confirmation of this report could be obtained at the offices of the steel corporation in this city, it nevertheless had the effect of keeping down the price of steel shares upon the stock exchange. There were plenty of rumors to the effect that there now existed a large short interest, not only in steel, but in Reading and the Union and Southern Pacifics and that an effort would soon be made to force the shorts to cover at much higher prices.

"That the bears were still resorting to some of their old tricks to depress prices was evident early in the session, when a report was received from Utica announcing that the vice-president of the United States had dropped dead of apoplexy. It took some time to get an authentic but positive denial of the truth of that report, and in the meantime many traders who attached credence to it were disposed to relinquish some of their holdings at lower prices. When it was known that the vice-president had been talking over the telephone to business friends this mornng prices began to advance.

"The status of the London market where consols remained unchanged, had little on the local market here today nor did the rather mixed bank statement forecast play any important part in the morning's transactions.

"Announcements this morning of the engagement of $2,800,000 in gold for London next Tuesday in addition to the $3,300,000 going away today, had no material effect upon the market, as it had already been pretty well understood that it might take another $10,000,000 of our gold to even up our trade balances with Europe.

"The market closed dull but rather firm at very slight net declines from yesterday's closing figures in a majority of the most active railroad and industrial issues, exceptions being as previously noted Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred.

The London Market.

"One encouraging feature of the London market today was the fact that consols did not show any further declines, even though it was reported that support came from the Government. Consols remained at 83 11-16 for the account and 83⅝ for money. There was a large attendance on the Exchange today on account of the annual election of the Stock Exchange committee, but the augmented attendance for purposes of election had the effect of retarding business.

"London speculators in continental securities have suffered considerably by the interruption of communication to Paris by reason of the striking postmen, telegraph and telephone operators, and one of the results has been to create a dull market for securities in general. In the case of Americans there has been an absence of firmness and the rule has been to hold them a shade below parity with New York. A rise of ¼ point in Mexican railway shares was attributed merely to covering by a rather large short interest. All the continental bourses were quiet. Rio Tintos remained unchanged at 67⅝.

The General Outlook.

"The behavior of the stock market this week has somewhat justified the predictions of those traders who for a long time have been clinging tenaciously to the theory that there could be no material or lasting improvement in the value of the securities until there was a corresponding betterment in trade in general, however much the venturesome might endeavor to anticipate actual worth by going into the market and making purchases in advance of real prosperity, so as not to be behind when the genuine upward movement starts.

"It was apparent that there could be no great improvement in our manufacturing trades until business men were able to obtain a pretty accurate idea of what their raw materials would cost them and what their products would be worth under the new tariff, and it was equally evident that the first step toward giving the business men of the country that necessary insight was the presentation of the proposed new tariff law.

"That step was taken on Wednesday of this week, when the Payne bill was introduced in the House of Representatives by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, whose members throughout the closing months of last Congress had been making examinations into the condition of the country's trade under instructions to prepare a new schedule of import duties which could pass muster in both Houses of Congress with the greatest dispatch consistent with proper deliberation upon a matter of such vital importance to our whole population.

"The important part of the whole affair to the market for securities lies in the fact that one more essential step toward settling the tariff question was taken this week when the Payne tariff bill was introduced. Operators for the rise in Wall street have been making a bull argument out of the proposal of the Ways and Means Committee to cut the duties on steel products.

Enforced Idleness.

"They point out the fact that whereas nearly everything else has undergone a rather severe liquidation since the panic of 1907, many branches of labor have not yet sustained their proportion of the liquidation, which it is believed will be necessary for every form of industry to undergo before business can be put once more upon a normal basis.

"It is true, they assert, that in nearly every avenue of trade some men have been thrown out of employment, and there is at present a large amount of enforced idleness such as always precedes a readjustment of business deranged after a panic like that we encountered more than a year ago. These bullish operators maintain that the proposed cut of 50 per cent in the duties on steel will afford all the steel companies and many kindred industries grounds upon which to make horizontal reductions in wages to where they ought to be to enable business to start up with a genuine revival.

"That some of the large independent companies did actually cut wages before the tariff bill was made public is merely an indication that the proposed cuts were divined by the steel men weeks in advance, and it is regarded as only natural that other steel companies should follow the wage reductions already in force in the plants of a few of the independents.

Mine Agreement.

"In this connection it is also worth noting that the agreement between the hard coal miners and the anthracite mine operators expires by limitation in one week from now, and that the mine owners are keenly alive to their technical advantage in driving a very good wage bargain with the workingmen for the next two or three years under penalty of shutting down their mines until they can profitably dispose of the large stocks of coal that have accumulated both on account of the mildness of the winter and the dullness in coal-consuming industries.

"In attempting to peer into the future those who follow the charts have had great difficulty in finding a complete analogy between the action of the stock market heretofore pending the discussion of a tariff bill and what the present market ought to do. The Dingley tariff law, enacted 12 years ago, was introduced after McKinley took office. As a result of its introduction the stock market, after an inconsequential dip, enjoyed a steady and rather pronounced rise in the price of securities for several months during and after the passage of the bill.

"But McKinley was not elected to the presidential office in a period of financial depression as was Taft. He was elected in 1896 and the Dingley tariff bill was passed in the summer of 1897. We had had a panic in 1893, followed by about two years of business depression, but by the time McKinley took office, nothwithstanding the free silver scare incident to Bryan's campaign against sound money, business in general had enjoyed considerable improvement. Therefore, the attempted analogy between the Payne bill and the Dingley bill fails to be complete.

Tariff Analogy.

"Likewise, it is impossible to find all the circumstances parallel in the case of the Payne bill and the Wilson-Gorman act, which was passed on Aug. 7, 1894. Grover Cleveland had just been elected President in 1892 and the panic of 1893 was upon the country when the Wilson-Gorman bill was under discussion in Congress. A Democrat was in the White House. There had been a change of political administration and in the minds of many superficial observers the new dominant party seemed to be responsible for the bad times.

"It was not strange, therefore, that the prices on the Stock Exchange should have remained low while the Wilson-Gorman bill was being whipped into shape. But in the case of the present Payne tariff bill there had been no shifting of the party in power in national affairs, and the business has already begun to recover from the depression following the panic of 1907. The analogy, therefore, fails to be complete either in the case of the Dingley bill or of the Wilson-Gorman tariff bill.

"Developments in the foreign exchange market took on new interest this week, when the rates for demand sterling rose to 4.8830, which was the highest point it had reached since the panic and which, of course, acted as a barometer, showing that the balance of trade between this country and elsewhere had reached the point where there would have to be further settlements in the world's only universal medium of exchange.

Gold for Export.

"Wall street was, therefore, not surprised to hear at intervals this week of further engagements of gold for export to London, some of which goes today, as that is really but a continuation of the movement to adjust the trade balances which have been ging on for some time between this country and Europe, but manifested hitherto mostly in shipments of gold to the Argentine Republic on London account. Had there been any available steamship bound for Buenos Ayres today some of the gold would have gone to South America. But at all events, the gold exported by United States would have been on account of London.

"As we drew from London in a few months following the panic of 1907 nearly $100,000,000 worth of gold, and have thus far sent back not more than a third of the amount we brought in at that time, we are apparently still ahead in the matter of transactions in the fundamental basis of exchange, and with money at continued easy rates, and with our interior bankers pressing it here for profitable investments, the continuation of our exports of gold into next week on account of London is not likely to have any ill effects on the financial situation here.

Hopes of Gain.

"Operators for the fall in the present market are, of course, basing their hopes of gain on the expectation that the attempt to make a general cut of wages in the industrial world may bring about strikes that might seriously retard the recovery of business even to the extent of nullifying the beneficent effects of an abundant harvest, which now seems to be assured by Government reports of grain on hand and of the precipitation of much needed moisture in the West.

"The bears will also make as much capital as possible over the continued war scare in Europe over the Servo-Austrian troubles, which might involve the large European nations either in actual war or put them to nearly as much expense in the matter of preparation as though war were actually to be declared."

RAILROAD NEWS AND GOSSIP

President Thomas P. Fowler of the New York, Ontario & Western Railway says that the current assumptions that the anthracite operators will declare a lockout if the miners are not willing to sign a three-year agreement on or before April 1 next are entirely gratuitous. He has not heard any suggestions of a lockout of the miners and does not believe that one will be declared. Officials of other hard-coal railroads agree with Mr. Fowler in this respect.

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY ON NEW YORK EXCHANGE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

The tone of the first few minutes was unsettled and feverish. Interboro and Metropolitan declined about a point and the others lost fractionally. Steel common lost ½ and the preferred ⅜. C. & O., Amalgamated and Rock Island preferred were fairly held when the rest of the list was heavy and a slight fractional gain was made in Erie common.

After the early losses sustained in the majority of issues the market became firmer and there was a slow upward movement during the balance of the first hour.

Governments unchanged; other bonds dull and irregular.

The bank statement follows: Loans, $1,301,635,400; decrease, $3,718,300.

Deposits, $1,348,465,300; decreased, $3,683,700.

Circulation, $48,581,900; increase, $32,200.

Legal tenders, $80,502,700; increase, $342,800.

Specie, $271,520,100; increase, $189,800.

Reserve, $352,022,800; increase, $532,600.

Reserve requirements, $337,116,325; decrease, $920,925.

Surplus, $14,906,475; increase, $1,453,525.

Ex U. S. deposits, $15,519,875; increase, $1,461,000.

The percentage of actual reserve in the clearing house banks today was 26.49.

Close: Money on call nominal; time loans quiet and steady; 60 days, 2¼@2½ per cent; 90 days, 2½@2¾ per cent, six months, 2¾@3 per cent.

The market closed barely steady, but lifeless. The drift of prices was downward again in the second hour, but the movement was held within the previous limit. Brooklyn Union Gas rose 3 and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 1. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Saulte Ste Marie and American Malting preferred declined 1.

St. Louis Stock Exchange.

Transactions were in rather moderate volume at the single session of the St. Louis Stock Exchange Saturday. Bonds formed a large majority of the sales, Alton-Granite 5s and K. C. Home Telephone 5s being in most demand. Prices were practically unchanged from the most recent quotations. Ely-Walker first preferred was advanced on the bid to 101.

Bank stocks were inactive.

LIVESTOCK.

Receipts, 100 cattle, 3500 hogs, no sheep and 50 horses and mules.

Fresh cattle receipts today were light. The only load of natives arriving were held over, while the balance of the supply, representing two cars of quarantines, consisted of a through shipment and a car of Mississippi steers. The latter sold at $4.95 per 100, which was 10c lower than Friday.

SHEEP—The market ruled quiet, with practically nothing on sale. The week closes with a good demand for the better grades and draggy on the poorer ones. Good lambs are quotable at $7@7.75, mutton sheep $5@5.75 and bucks $3.75@4.75.

HORSES AND MULES—Receipts of horses and mules were light today, and the business in both departments was of corresponding volume.

COTTON PRICES CLOSE LOWER AFTER IRREGULAR MOVEMENT

NEW YORK, March 20.—The cotton market opened at unchanged prices to an advance of 2 points, which was hardly a full response to the higher cables, owing to a bearish view of the first section of the census figures showing a crop of 13,408,841 bales, including linters. When it was found that the linters amounted to 344,970 bales, the largest on record, thus reducing the crop of lint cotton to 13,036,000 bales, compared with the Government's estimate of 12,920,000 bales, the market worked to a net advance of 2@4 points, but local traders were heavy sellers on the bulge. Demand did not seem to be broadening and later in the morning the market eased off again to a let loss of about 1@3 points inconsequence. Week-end figures were rather bullish and further rains were reported in the Eastern belt.

The close was at a reaction to the easier levels, but was steady.

WHEAT RECEDES UNDER PRESSURE

Prices Sell Off Steadily on Generally Bearish Trend of News and Poor Support.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKETS IN BRIEF.

CHICAGO, March 20.—The wheat market was steady early in the session today, following a decline of ⅛c to ⅜@½c at the start. Lower cables and additional rain in Oklahoma and Southern Kansas prompted some selling by pit traders, but offerings were readily absorbed by commission houses after the first few minutes of trade. May opened at $1.15⅝ to $1.15¼ and sold off to $1.15⅛. July opened at $1.03⅛ to $1.03⅜ and sold at $1.03⅜@1.03⅞.

The market developed additional weakness later in the day, the July delivery being under considerable selling pressure by longs. May dropped to $1.15⅛ and July to $1.02⅞. The close was weak at almost the bottom, May being off ⅝@⅞c at $1.15⅛@1.15⅝. July was down ¼@1c at $1.03.

The corn market followed wheat in its downward course, May declining to 65⅝c. The close was weak, with May off ⅝@⅞c at 65⅝@65⅞c.

Oats closed ⅛c to ¼@⅜c lower for the day.

With the spring weather all that could be asked for the advancement of the crop and with advices from all over the belt reporting the plant in very good condition, a decided bearish sentiment became general in the local wheat market. The general news was in favor of that faction and with practically no support from the outside apparent, prices were depressed to fractionally lower levels. The close was ⅝c to ⅞c down for the day.

A weak tone prevailed in the markets of Europe. Prices in all markets of that continent were lower and there were reports of favorable weather and a good crop outlook in Germany and other countries. This, together with predictions of liberal world's shipments and other bearish statistics for Monday, caused a general selling movement at the opening. Traders were generally inclined toward the bearish side of the market, being encouraged in that direction by the splendid crop prospect and backward shipping demand.

Receipts were again somewhat below those of last year, but were larger than the recent volume and the cash markets were extremely dull. Millers are buying but little, having curtailed their purchases until flour sales improve from their present very dull position. There was little export demand to speak of.

The market showed very little support and was slow to rally on temporary cessations of pressure. There was little outside interest, but quite a good business was transacted among the pit professionals. The market was fairly active, with prices declining steadily in the early parts of the session.

May wheat opened ⅛c lower at $1.13¼, declined to $1.12⅞ and rallied to $1.13. July wheat opened ⅛@¼c lower at $1.00⅝, declined to 1.00⅛, rallied to $1.00⅝ and sagged to $1.00½. September wheat opened ⅛c lower at 96⅛c, advanced to 97c and declined to 96⅛c.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅝d to ½d lower. Berlin wheat, ⅜c lower; Antwerp wheat unchanged, and Budapest wheat, ⅝c lower.

The New York Produce Exchange figures make world's wheat shipments 12,500,000 bu. Actual year ago were 10,528,000 bu. The Broomhall estimate for this week indicates about 11,000,000 bu.

Chicago cash sales of wheat Friday were 32,000; 15,000 bu of it was No. 2 red, sold to go to Fort Worth, Tex., the price said to be 1.45 delivered there. Export sales of wheat, 296,000 durum and Manitoba. Sales corn 160,000 bu and oats 140,000 bu.

The late trading was active and prices nervous. A rally seemed in progress for awhile, prices working up somewhat from the low point, but heavy pressure again set in near the end of the session and prices receded. The close was weak at the low point. May wheat closed at $1.12⅝@1.13⅛ bid. July wheat closed $1.00¼ sellers and September wheat at 96¼@96½c sellers. Minneapolis stocks decreased 10,000 bu for one day. Cash wheat ruled steady. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 210,000 bu.

Primary receipts of wheat were 501,070 bu, with shipments of 282,050 bu, and local receipts were 22,099 bu, with shipments of 28,090 bu.

Corn ruled weak in sympathy with wheat and under rather aggressive bear operations. Receipts of corn were larger than expected, with country offerings free and the shipping demand was slow. Prices ranged at lower levels throughout and closed at declines of ⅝@⅞c for the day. Cash corn was weak. Corn clearances were 193,000 bu. Cables on corn closed ⅛d lower.

Primary receipts of corn were 606,333 bu with shipments of 503,051 bu and local receipts were 69,635 bu with shipments of 48,000 bu.

Oats futures were inactive and closed nominally unchanged to ⅜c lower. Cash oats were dull and weak. Oats clearances were 14,000 bu.

Primary receipts of oats were 534,282 bu with shipments of 405,415 bu, and local receipts were 72,000 bu with shipments of 55,120 bu.

Lost and Found

IF YOU LOSE ANYTHING—Advertise it here. It will be returned to you if an honest person finds it. Remarkable recoveries are brought about every day through this column. All druggists receive Want Ads for the Post-Dispatch at office rates.
Advertisements received after 11:40 a. m. will be inserted in later editions on "Market" page.
IF YOU FIND ANYTHING bring it to the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau, 210-212 North Broadway.
Get a claim check. Have it advertised. Reclaim it if the owner does not.
THE LAW—People who find lost articles are interested in knowing that the State Law (Section 8475 to 8480, Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1899) is strict in requiring them to seek the owners through advertisement and otherwise, and that a failure to do so, if same can be proven, involves a severe penalty.

MAJ. G. W. CAREY, JUROR WHO SAVED THAW'S LIFE, IS DEAD

Southerner Doggedly Stood Out Against Conviction and Was Prepared for Long Siege.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Maj. George W. Carey, the former Thaw juror to whom Harry Thaw probably owes his life, died Thursday at Bretton Hall and his body was shipped to New Orleans, his former home, last night.

Maj. Carey stood out as one of the prominent figures in the last Thaw trial, and in the long fight in the jury room it was he, according to all accounts, who doggedly stood out against any other verdict than the one which was reached.

A friend of District Attorney Jerome's who knew Maj. Carey wrote to Mr. Jerome from Washington when he saw that Carey had been accepted on the jury, to get the Southerner off if he could. "He'll oppose conviction, and once his mind is made up nothing on earth can move him," he said. Mr. Jerome had already accepted Carey, and it was impossible to dislodge him. Carey afterward told this same friend that he would have stood out in the jury room 20 years if necessary to prevent a verdict of guilty.

He went into the jury room in a bathrobe, prepared for a long siege. He argued with all the jurors, using every means of persuasion at his command.

STOLEN $53,000 RETURNED IN TWO FINDS TO FARMER

$18,000 Discovered by Son Buried in Cellar at His Home.

THE MYSTERY IS DEEP

Secrecy Clothes Finding of $35,000—Money Disappeared at Reunion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., March 20.—David Myers, who recently lost $53,000 from an iron safe he kept at his home, has had the entire amount restored to him. The money came back in two finds. The first was discovered in a cellar at the home of his son, Clarence, who made the find. The first intimation that the money might be buried in the cellar came to the son, when he noticed the earth disturbed in the cellar, and, in digging about the place, unearthed a package containing $18,000.

It was announced that the search for the rest of the money would be given up, but it develops that the search was continued quietly and persistently, and resulted in uncovering the missing $35,000, but where it was located has not been made public, and an effort will be made to keep the particulars of the find a secret.

Is Also a Money Lender.

Myers is a farmer, living about ten miles from this city, and also is engaged in money loaning. It was when he went to his safe to deposit a payment that had been made on a mortgage that he discovered his loss. The money was taken while a family reunion was in progress at the Myers home, last fall, and in spite of the efforts to keep it secret the story leaked out, about as soon as the money was found.

Myers kept his money at home, because he did not believe in banks, but he has changed his plans, and the banks now take care of his surplus thousands. He was thought to possess only an ordinary amount of money, and the disclosures brought about over the losing and finding of the $53,000 caused much surprise in his family, and among the residents of the district in general. Detectives have been working on the case since last fall.

SWIMMING POOL FOR NEWSBOYS

Hugh Campbell Provides for Tank in Father Dunne's Home.

Hugh Campbell, a wealthy bachelor, who has been the "good angel" of Father Dunne's Newsboys' Home, and has given nearly $100,000 to the home, has made another contribution to it. He has given money to build a swimming pool. Excavations for the big pool are being made in the rear of the home at Garrison and Washington avenues. The pool will be ready when warm weather comes.

Separate Cars for the Girls So Sweet Will Surely Give Some of Them a Seat

A movement to demand separate street cars for women has been started in New York.—News Item.

NOW Wouldn't that be just too
Exclusive cars for Sadie,
Hazel, Myrtle, Maud and May,
And when we reach that happy day
Who wouldn't be a "lady?"

WITH mirrors hung on every seat,
A place for storing gum;
A trading stamp with every ride
A box of chocolate fudge beside—
Won't that be going some?

BUT, still, we wonder if the girls
Would ride on cars exclusive;
No men in sight to much admire
Their hats and puffs and spring attire
And all their charms elusive.

TOOK A DRINK TWO MONTHS AGO; POLICEMAN LOSES PLACE

Fined $90 Then, George Pohlmeyer Failed to Make Time-Payments on Jewelry Since.

One drink of brandy changed the career of Patrolman George H. Pohlmeyer, who, until he was summoned before the board two months ago on charges, was a model policeman.

Pohlmeyer was fined $90 for drinking while on duty. His defense was that he had taken a swallow of brandy to relieve an aching tooth. The board gave him permission to pay the fine in monthly installments of $30 each. He paid the first one.

Later representatives of two time-payment diamond houses complained that Pohlmeyer had purchased a ring and stud, but had failed to meet the payments. It then developed that Pohlmeyer had disappeared from his place of lodging at 3739 Cook avenue. He failed to report for duty in the Dayton Street District and charges were preferred against him.

Copies of the charges were left at Pohlmeyer's boarding house, and Friday, when he failed to appear for trial, the commissioners dismissed him from the force.

Patrolman Thomas L. Gregory of the Soulard Street District was fined $25 and reprimanded for visiting a resort in the red light district in his uniform.

THIRTY-THREE ENTER ORDER OF SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH

Twelve Novices Take Their Vows While Four Nuns Celebrate 50th Anniversary of Retirement.

At the mother house of the Sisters of St. Joseph, in Carondelet, 33 young women postulates received the habit of the order and 12 novices took their vows Friday.

Four venerable nuns celebrated quietly at the same time the fiftieth anniversary of their entrance into the order. They were Sisters Winnifred, Victor, Mary and Assissium.

Sister Mary, before she became a nun, was Sarah Walsh, youngest sister of the late James and Austin Walsh of St. Louis. Among her nephews and nieces at the celebration were Frank P. Walsh and family of Kansas City, James M. Walsh and family of Jefferson City and Mrs. C. R. Webb and family of St. Louis.

Of the postulates who received the habit Friday the following live in St. Louis: Mary Jeanette Foristel, Edith Donovan, Mary Deneeffe, Blanche Daly, Anna Amend, Mary Loretta Breen and Cecilia Lynch.

M. A. W. McDonald Is Released.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 20.—M. A. W. McDonald, the millionaire Minneapolis lumberman imprisoned in the Hennepin County Jail on a charge of bigamy preferred by a Missouri woman, was released late yesterday after Gov. John A. Johnson had received word that the requisition of Gov. Hadley of Missouri had been withdrawn.

SALESMAN IS ROBBED AND SERIOUSLY HURT; 3 MEN HELD

Tennesseean's Skull Is Fractured in Saloon Scuffle With East St. Louisans.

Joe Cox, Thomas Stirling and F. J. Griner are under arrest in East St. Louis awaiting the outcome of injuries inflicted on F. W. Scudder in a fight Friday night in the saloon of John Miers, 15 North Main street. Scudder's skull is fractured and he is in a dangerous condition at St. Mary's Hospital.

Scudder is a tobacco salesman from Chattanooga, Tenn. While drinking in the saloon he became engaged in an argument with the three men over his refusal to buy a drink for a negro. Cox admits that he struck Scudder and that he fell and struck his head on the pavement. Stirling and Griner say they merely carried Scudder into a side room after he was hurt.

Scudder says he was robbed of $27 during the scuffle. His mother, who lives in Kentucky, has been sent for, as it is thought he will die.

INSURANCE ON TAFT'S LIFE IS ESTIMATED AT $300,000

He Is One of Most Heavily "Protected" Presidents Country Has Ever Had.

NEW YORK, March 20.—President Taft, insurance men in the city say, is one of the most heavily insured presidents that the United States has had. Roosevelt carried heavy policies, but not for as much as Cleveland or Taft.

Mr. Taft has policies in the Equitable, the Mutual and the New York Life. So much is a certainty. What other companies may carry risks on his life is not common knowledge. It is known that each of "The Big Three" carries at least $50,000 insurance on Mr. Taft's life. Mr. Taft is also reported to be insured in several Western companies for smaller amounts. The total is said to be $200,000.

PENALTIES RENEWED BY VETO

Contractor Didn't Remove Debris; Sought Relief Through Bill.

Penalties amounting to $4700 from which Joseph O'Shea, a contractor, sought escape through a bill passed by the Municipal Assembly, have been renewed by the Mayor's veto of the measure.

O'Shea paid the city $4900 for the wreckage of 24 buildings on the blocks between Market street, Clark avenue, Thirteenth street and Fourteenth street. In addition he furnished a bond of $5000 to guarantee that the debris should be removed before Dec. 15, 1908, and to insure the payment of a penalty of $50 for each day during which the obligation remained unfulfilled.

The wreckage has not been removed because of O'Shea's alleged inability to rent cheaply a lot on which to store the old materials.

FORMER BALL PLAYER IS SUED

William L. Hasemeier, who was a member of the old St. Louis Browns baseball club, was sued in the Circuit Court Friday by his former wife, Mrs. R. G. Huskey, for $3500. She says this amount is due her for boarding, clothing and educating their child, Flora, 15 years old.

Mrs. Huskey was divorced from Hasemeier in 1900 and married again Sept. 1, 1907. She lives with her second husband at De Soto, Mo. Hasemeier has been in the East several years, but recently returned to St. Louis and is living at Jefferson avenue and Natural Bridge road. He has an interest in the estate of his mother, who died a few months ago.

FOUR MILLION LETTERS HELD UP BY PARIS STRIKE

200,000 Telegrams Undelivered—Condition Borders on Anarchy.

Copyright, 1909, by the Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, March 20.—Compromise with the Postoffice strikers seems impossible. Still 4,000,000 letters and 200,000 telegrams await delivery. "But methods of communication have improved; Paris is isolated no longer.

Cablegrams to America are subjected to long delay. Some letters are being delivered; some telephones are working; but business houses continue to send messengers with letters to London and Brussels.

The original cause of the strike is lost sight of. The strikers' demand for higher wages, shorter hours and the old system of promotion by seniority are forgotten in their intense hatred of Simyan, Postmaster-General under Interior Minister Barthou.

Simyan astonished the deputies by declaring that nine of their number got Subra, the strikers' leader, appointed to the Postoffice Department. The debate in the Chamber of Deputies on the strike continues. The strikers demand Simyan's resignation, but the Government announces that it will not yield an inch.

Borders on Anarchy.

While other strikes here have been more picturesque and the strikers riotous, none in recent years can compare with this in seriousness. At 6 o'clock Wednesday Paris was cut off from the rest of the world as far as mails, cables, telegraphs, telephones were concerned. The last cable connecting France with America had ceased to work; there was no telegraphic communication with London, Berlin or Brussels; every telephone was silent.

So the alarming rumors that are current are almost justified by existing conditions. The situation borders on anarchy.

The public bears good naturedly the inconveniences to which it is subjected. On the streets the crowds are as gay and indifferent as ever, and the boulevards show their usual animation.

HALF-INCH OF GLASS IN HIS EYE

Boy Sobs Ten Weeks Before Cause of Pain Is Found.

ACADIA, La., March 20.—After sobbing incessantly for ten weeks with a pain which he said was in one of his eyes and the cause for which could not be ascertained, the young son of Postmaster Jack Sutton of Bear Creek, was taken yesterday to an oculist and a piece of glass half an inch long and nearly as wide was found lodged behind the child's left eyeball.

HIS 'DEAR LITTLE SANDSNIPE' SUES RICH MAN'S SON

Miss Cora Sinclair Asks $50,000 Because S. S. Laird Jr. Married a Widow.

NEW YORK, March 20.—After five years' courting, when marriage seemed as sure to her as anything can be in this world, says Miss Cora Sinclair, her wooer, Samuel S. Laird Jr. of Philadelphia, married a wealthy Philadelphia widow, Mrs. Lillian G. Hayes. He did it without even sending an apology. Therefore, she has sued him for $50,000 for breach of promise.

Laird is the son of Samuel S. Laird, a millionaire. The Lairds have offered to settle the case several times, Miss Sinclair says, but she feels so hurt by her former sweetheart's conduct that she wants the full amount for which she has sued.

The young man used to write fond letters every day, in which he called her such pet names as "my dear little sand snipe" and "my dearest Sandy." Fifty such missives are part of the evidence she intends to use on the trial.

One letter he wrote from Philadelphia ran:

"My Dear Little Sand Snipe: I almost worked myself to death tonight to finish my work so that I would be able to start for New York tomorrow. I will be with you only a few hours after you receive this. To think of it! Only a few hours and I will be with the dearest little girl in New York. A million kisses until I see you.

"YOUR OWN HONEY."

Writes He Loves Another.

In a letter that will be an exhibit, Laird called her his "dear little wifey-to-be."

In August, 1907, the blow came. She got a letter from him that ran:

"Miss Cora Sinclair: You have no doubt observed that I have been neglecting you for the last few months. Now, I am going to tell you something and don't make a fuss. I am in love with the sweetest girl in the world and I intend to marry her. This is probably a great surprise to you. I have spoiled you as you have spoiled me. Now, don't make a fuss, because that will cause us both a lot of trouble and nothing will come of it. Just make the most of it and be a good little girl. Yours sincerely,

S. S. LAIRD."

The coldness of the opening and the ending of this letter stung Miss Sinclair, but far more cruel to her was his statement that he was in love with "the sweetest little girl in the world." When she could not get further explanation from her former sweetheart she sued.

Harney Heights Wants Policemen.

The Police Board has under consideration a formal request from residents of Harney Heights, in Northwest St. Louis, for better police protection. The petition says there have been several robberies in the Heights and only mounted policemen are seen there occasionally. A detail of two patrolmen is asked.

COMMITTEE WILL BEGIN INQUIRY OF TAX DODGERS

House Resolutions Charge Merchants and Manufacturers Have Escaped Levy.

A special committee of the House of Delegates will begin an investigation Monday afternoon of the amount of taxes and licenses paid by St. Louis manufacturers and merchants, some of whom are alleged to be escaping their share of the burden of taxation. This charge was contained in the resolution by which the committee was created at Friday night's session.

The investigators will be Delegates Sachse and Simmons, Republicans, and Wollet, McShane and Tobin, Democrats.

They are empowered to examine books and papers, and summon witnesses.

Nicholas P. L. Rosch has volunteered to act as counsel for the committee without pay.

Rosch recently announced his intention of starting an investigation to determine whether certain officers and members of the Municipal Voters' League are paying their taxes. The League is making a fight on certain candidates for re-election to the House of Delegates.

Special Policemen Brennan and Chrismer, appointed as a bodyguard to accompany Delegates Fay to the meeting Friday night, were ordered from the floor on a motion made by Delegate Priesmeyer.

Fay arrived in the delegate's chamber accompanied by the policemen and about 20 of his constituents from the Twenty-fourth Ward, who were there to protect him in case he should be attacked. When Fay walked to his seat his bodyguard went with him. Priesmeyer jumped to his feet and moved that rule 53, forbidding any persons besides members from appearing on the floor, be enforced.

His motion carried, and Assistant Clerk Danny Corbett, acting as sergeant-at-arms, ordered the bodyguard to retire.

No effort to molest Fay was made.

WOMEN FIGHT HIGHER TARIFF ON STOCKINGS

Federation of Clubs Will Exert Influence Against the Payne Bill.

CHICAGO, March 20.—"Kill the stocking tax."

A country-wide movement against certain features of the Payne tariff bill, which will be participated in by more than 2,000,000 women, is seen in plans just launched here. Chicago clubwomen have determined to enlist the National Federation of Women's Clubs in an attack on the schedule in its application to stockings and stocking material.

Features of the Payne bill which maintain the present high tariff on wool, silk and cotton stuffs and even increase the tariff on cotton stockings of every description, are also being discussed.

A special meeting of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs is to be called immediately for the purpose of organizing an anti-stocking tax lobby. Mrs. Francis Everett, president of the Illinois Federation, announces that the stocking tax situation will be brought at once to the attention of the national organization.

"It is fortunate for us, too, that the general council of the national federation meetin in San Antonio, Tex., next week," said Mrs. Everett. "Of course this matter will be brought before that body as the most important thing for consideration among a thousand interests."

It is said that prices of all varieties of stockings have been steadily increasing for the last twenty years and that within the last three years values have gone up by leaps and bounds.

Judge Hayward Refuses Place.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., March 20.—A telegram from Washington states that Judge William Hayward, who was offered the position of first assistant Postmaster-General, had declined the place and will remain secretary of the National Republican Committee.

WOMAN'S NIGHTMARE

No woman's happiness can be complete without children; it is her nature to love and want them as much so as it is to love the beautiful and pure. MOTHER'S FRIEND as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, obtained by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially, and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy, and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

The cry is for Speed! Speed! Speed!—and the Oliver responds.

The demand for Durability is filled by the sturdy, steel-clad Oliver.

To call for a writing machine that will do many things and do each of them equally well, the Oliver answers with its unexampled versatility.

—Its visible writing saves the strain on eye and brain.

—It's legibility lends beauty to its work. The letters that bear the Oliver imprint are the letters that seem to speak.

Oliver No. 5 fairly bristles with new and exclusive time-and-money-saving features. We have space to mention only a few of the more important ones.

—Disappearing Indicator shows exact printing point.

—Balance Shifting Mechanism saves operative effort.

—Line Ruling Device is fine for tabulated work.

—Double Release doubles convenience.

—Non-Vibrating Base insures stability. Yet with all of these added improvements, we have still further simplified the Oliver—by fusing brains with metal.

Oliver No. 5 is a dream come true—the dream of Thomas Oliver crystalized into this wonderful mechanism of shining steel that embodies every possible requirement of a perfect writing machine.

BANK OF ENGLAND CHAIRS

We are closing out a number of patterns in Office Chairs, both oak and mahogany—wood and leather seats—among which are some Bank of England type. It's a good opportunity to get a few right.
